Claud Deering Smoothed His Path of Love

By H. M. EGBERT

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

CLAUD DEERING was as happy as a rising young doctor could be, for he was to marry Ray Clifford.

Neither of them was in their first youth. Deering was thirty and Ray had confessed that there was only a year or two between them.

And Ray had been married before.

Deering knew all about that tragedy in her life; the inexperienced girl, fascinated by the rogue who wanted the legacy that her father had left her. John Brooks was a man of the world and, having got possession of her small fortune, had left her for another woman, three months after the marriage. Later came news of his death in a brawl in a low saloon and Ray resumed her maiden name.

As Deering sat in his office, dreaming over the happiness in store for her, there came a knock at the door. A ragged tramp was standing outside.

"Doc Deering?" he inquired, with a surly scowl.

"That's right," answered the doctor, heartily. "Come in and sit down."

The man collapsed into a chair, and then Deering saw that he was in the last stage of emaciation.

"I heard—I heard that you were going to marry Ray Brooks tomorrow," he muttered. "That's why I came. I'm—I'm John, her husband."

Deering took the blow quite calmly, as a man should. He took the tramp's arm in his hands and began feeling the pulse. "You're in a bad way, lay friend," he said. "You'd best go into the hospital. I'll drive you there tonight. And let me tell you, you'll have to change your manner of life if you want to pull through."

"That's all very well," sneered the man, "but you can't throw me off the scent like that. If you want to marry Ray, you're going to pay for it."

"If your statement is true," Deering answered quietly, "you have the situation in your own hands. But I'm going to take you to the hospital!"

"I'll go!" muttered the man. "But when I come out I'll make you pay."

"Miss Lennox not on duty tonight?" asked the doctor of the night nurse.

"She'll be coming on at twelve, Doctor Deering," answered the young woman.

"I'll wait for her," Deering answered. "I am rather anxious to talk with her about this case."

When the man opened his eyes Deering felt that he was growing stronger. In spite of himself, the thought would come that this wreck of a man would be better off dead. Why should such useless lives linger, to make only misery?

The man leered at him.

"Say, Doc," he said, "this is a mighty comfortable bed to sleep in. It's weeks since I had a bed like this. But I'm going to make you pay, just the same, if you want Ray."

A groan broke from the doctor's lips. He clenched his hands and strode up and down the room.

The sick man's eyes followed him.

"Once," he said, when Deering returned to his bedside, "you could have put that all over me. You could have won my gratitude and worked upon my better nature. But I guess I'm too old a bird to be caught by kindness. You'll pay fifteen hundred if you want Ray."

Deering turned upon him.

"Do you think I am a bigamist?" he cried. "If you are John Brooks, you've got me in your power. But you won't get a chance to torture that helpless woman again."

The man did not answer him. Deering saw his eyes fixed in terror upon something—some one on the opposite side of the room. He looked round. Miss Lennox was approaching the bed.

"Good-evening," began Deering, and stopped. There was the same look of terror upon the face of the nurse.

"Why—" the doctor began. "Why—"

"Oh, I guess she remembers me," burst out Brooks, with an oath. "She ought to. We lived together long enough for her to know my face."

"That man is my husband, doctor!" said the nurse. "Oh, why did you bring him here?"

"When did this marriage occur?" inquired Deering.

"Eight years ago," answered Miss Lennox. "Oh, why did you bring him here?"

"I didn't know, my dear," answered Deering. "I'm sorry. But he is just a patient and shall not trouble you."

"I don't know about that," answered Brooks with a snarl.

"But I know," answered Deering, sternly. "If you married Miss Lennox eight years ago, your marriage with Miss Clifford was a bigamous one."

"Well, I guess she won't like to be told she wasn't legally married," sneered Brooks.

"She will not be told," answered the doctor, quietly. "If you so much as dare to let her see your face at any time I shall have you clapped into jail for bigamy."

And then an amazing thing happened that changed his ideas of human nature. For the nurse sunk down beside the man and put her arms round him and cried upon his breast.

And when Deering looked at the face of the man he saw two tears rolling down his cheeks.

Silently he went out. He knew now that his bride would never learn of the tragedy that had so nearly blighted their happiness.

Fresh and Lovely as a Morning Glory is a Dress in Pale Shades of Rose and Orchid Over a Slip of Flesh-Colored Crepe—One of the Late Styles in Chiffon Printed in Garden-Flower Pattern is Introduced in a Midsummer Gown.

Dainty Fabric Is in Milady's Favor

Organdie, Dotted Swiss, Muslin and Other Materials, Fashion Leaders.

There was once a homely saying that in France the rustle of a petticoat meant silk, in other countries starch. That, says a fashion writer in the New York Times, was before the days when silk petticoats, silk frocks and stockings became as common as they had once been rare, and before people of a sturdier standard and those of lighter type had been harmonized by cosmopolitan fashions. This popular notion has since swept French and American styles to a similar conclusion, which is that muslin frocks belong to Americans, and that they are out of date, their crisp frilliness dimmed by the luster of French silk and tissues.

The muslin frock in all its sheer freshness and its many variants has been for generations the American woman's charming own, dainty, coquettish, eternally feminine; and many a woman of fashion of the older regime has regretted that her granddaughter could not know the pleasure of dressing in flowered "French" organdie, dotted swiss, book muslin, or the smooth, cool linen lawns. They were the accepted summer dress, as much for town as for country wear.

The muslin frock disappeared with the muslin girl. Athletics, the motor-car, sports, life in the open, made demand for simpler lines, more substantial fabrics and much of the homespun idea for day wear. Once the new silhouette was established, the picture changed, and the muslin girl became the tailored girl, mannish, severe, dashing, "top style" for the vigorous day, and the chiffon girl for the evening.

Flannels, twills, heavy linens and loose-woven silks, treated much as the tailor employs stuffs for men's wear, have been for a dozen years the proper thing for informal occasions, while for dressy times all the newest weaves in starchless voiles, crepes, chiffons, marquisettes, silks, satins and brocades were required. The ruffled muslin passed with the crinoline, the floppy leghorn, lace mitts and long curls. The new version is a picture of slim body, athletic limb, curveless bodice and classic draperies.

The American vision was lost and the Parisian pattern was copied to all of the extremes, with many extravagant indulgences in exotic phases of foreign influence. All of the effect of satiety has been experienced within a season, and gradually but unmistakably the quaint styles in dress and accessories have been coming into view. Costume affairs in fashionable society and exhibitions of artistic costuming in studios and in the theater have recalled to the older and shown to the younger generation the beauty, the romance and the tradition in dress characteristic of ourselves, and couturiers have been alert in responding to the suggestion.

Winsome New Materials.

No season within merchants' memory has brought out a greater number of original styles in new materials. The woman who is able to gratify her desire in this summer's wardrobe has a bewildering collection from which to choose. Simplicity more simple than ever before is the keynote, especially in the handsomest evening gowns seen at smart affairs on the other side, the conspicuous attraction being in the goods of the dress. Trimming on these formal gowns is of exceptional richness; ostrich, which retains its intense popularity, and metal lace and embroidery, each sparingly and effectively used on flat surfaces.

The frock that answers the purpose of the old-time sheer muslin is of the designated by many names—printed silk, marquisette, chiffon and so many grades—all of which have been seen in the early season's models. These are built for the most part on incomplex plans, though the latest importations illustrate many new features, indicating quite plainly the direction in which the fashion tide will set at the opening of the coming season.

The printed crepes and silks are very modish in the straight tunic over a close skirt of contrasting color, or outlined with a band of plain goods. This model, for which the woman of the slender silhouette has a passion, is particularly happy when done in the silks of bold pattern, notably the conventional palm leaf and the other designs that are among this year's novelties.

In the draped models there is a following of whims and moods, with the fullness drawn forward to the front, to be caught directly in the middle front, hanging lower than the hem of the gown, and with flounces, straight or circular; godets, scarf draperies, sashes, girdles and plaited or flaring skirts. Apparently several styles, greatly diversified, are being presented, as if to sense in advance the popular choice and establish a mode.

All of these and other designs are attractively shown in models of much originality and style, demonstrating the values of the new materials. For the one-piece or tunic frock for morning and all-day utility the eponge in cotton or silk or a mixture, made in checks, stripes and plain goods, is a novelty that has taken rather strongly. Ratine, in silk, cotton or silk and wool, is another new weave, rough in finish, loosely woven and smart, especially when it is made into a sports or beach frock.

Rich Formal Gowns.

In the more formal gowns the embroidered silks and flat crepes, embroidered solid, are exceedingly handsome, and are so costly that one such creation in a wardrobe is cherished and reserved for gala occasions. Bengaline, all silk, or silk and wool, is another revival of an old-time favorite, of which some stunning French models are built, with simplicity of lines, soft, scant drapery and a splash, a band or motif of colorful needlework. These are charming in the gentle shades, beige, maize, gray, powder blue, against which the crewels so much used in peasant embroidery make a striking note.

Reverting to the sheer frock, the up-to-date version of the organdie, there are new voiles of gossamer lightness, on which are printed the most enchanting patterns of flowers, butterflies, birds and many another fantasy. These have something of the sheer beauty of organdie but lack stiffness and may be beautifully draped or flounced, though the elaborate designs are shown to best advantage when they are gathered or slightly draped.

The qualifying appellation of "chiffon" is attached to many of the latest types of thin dress goods. There are chiffon voiles, crepe chiffon, chiffon cloth and chiffon. Some are printed in delicate, beautifully colored patterns; some are plain or shaded in rainbow tints or gradations of one color.

Flock dot muslin is really a dotted swiss, woven in many "wash colors," and the English prints are the real novelty of the year. These are in prim, modest patterns, invariably small and geometric, in black and white, gray and white, violet or blue and white, scarlet and beige. Their being hand-blocked is a guarantee of the durability of their colors.

The craze for hand-blocked, indelibly printed cottons is well illustrated in the India prints, which are sold by the yard and might easily be mistaken for curtains or bed coverings. They are oriental in pattern and riotous in colors blended and assorted with the fancy skill of an ancient art. Some of these are reproductions of the printed spreads and hangings which several of the more important shops have imported, and they are unique and amusing as dress makings.

In at least a score of years there has not been more beauty and artistic value in dress materials and design than this season has presented.

HERRICK REFRIGERATORS

The Big Difference In Refrigerators

The main object of any refrigerator, of course, is the preservation of foods. The refrigerator that will keep foods in perfect condition longest is naturally the refrigerator you want—provided it doesn't increase your ice bills.

The Herrick answers those requirements with facts—not claims. And it does even more. It actually decreases your ice bills while giving you more effective food preservation.

And why? Simply because the Herrick is far more than an ice box—far more than a cold storage place. It is built on the scientifically demonstrated principle that more than merely cold air is necessary to keep foods in good condition for any great length of time.

Perhaps the biggest essentials to scientifically correct refrigeration are—

- No. 1. Circulation of cold dry air.
- No. 2. Effective insulation.
- No. 3. Air-tight construction.

That the Herrick has these necessary essentials is a demonstrated fact.

Many proofs of the truth are visible even to the least informed purchaser. Others are hidden within the walls of the refrigerator, but nevertheless there, performing their functions so important to good health and economy.

TENT SHOW RAINED OUT.

The Scott Sisters Players playing under canvas at the Mason show lot were rained out last night. There were about a hundred people gathered in spite of the inclement weather and rather than disappoint them Mrs. Scott gave them a free vaudeville entertainment of about a half hour. From reports of those present if the plays presented are as good as the vaudeville samples last night they have a good show.

The Scott Sisters will present a repertoire of up-to-date comedies and dramas with good vaudeville between acts with a complete change of program every night; they have a good four piece orchestra. They feature Friday night that old-time but ever popular play, "St. Elmo."

KILLED BY BULL

"Dirt Farmer" Candidate for Governor Gored on His Farm

Vermillion, S. D., Aug. 12.—A. S. Anderson, 50, "dirt farmer," candidate for the gubernatorial nomination on the Democratic ticket, was gored to death by a bull on his farm near this place. Anderson went to the pasture to bring home the cows and when he was overdue, his hired man investigated, finding his body.

Mr. Anderson entered politics in 1910 when he won a seat in the legislature from Clay county. In 1912 he was re-elected and again in 1914, defeating the latter year Carl Gunderson, now Republican gubernatorial nominee. He was nominated by the Democrats in 1916 as lieutenant governor and polled more votes than any of his running mates. He declined the Democratic nomination for governor in 1922 but accepted this year.

IT PAYS TO ADVISE

POMPEIIANS ALIVE TO
VALUE OF PUBLICITYInscriptions on Walls Reveal
Customs and Thoughts.

Let us go into one of the completely uncovered Pompeian streets. The first detail that attracts our attention is the varied decoration of the house fronts. Frescoes, caricatures, illustrated signs, drawings, inscriptions—this extraordinary imagery gives what one might call malicious eyes to every wall and a most persuasive tongue.

It is evident that gayety once reigned in this popular thoroughfare, and from the variety of texts inscribed on the walls we understand that, among the passions of the epoch, politics held an important place, writes Edouard Schneider in L'Illustration, Paris. (Translated for the Kansas City Star).

Here women freely confess their preferences for this or that candidate for the triumvirate, edileship, decemvirate or some other public office. A number of the inscriptions are plainly of nocturnal origin: "Thou with the lantern, hold my ladder firmly."

Three gladiatorial notices appear on the front of a house once occupied by Trebio Valente. "Gneus Alletius Nigidius Malus, at the quinquennial games, without expense to the public, will stage combats between twenty pairs of gladiators and their substitutes, Pompeius, Savellius, Tigilius and Clodius."

The second informs us of a similar combat, adding the information that "there will be a combat with ferocious beasts and the velarium will be stretched across the amphitheater to keep off the sun."

The third, still more picturesque, invites the public to a spectacle which will be given in the amphitheater to celebrate the dedication of the public archives in the Forum of Pompeii. It tells us that Gneus Alletius Nigidius Malus's gladiators will fight; that there will be a procession, an animal hunt, and that the amphitheater will be protected by the valerium. One odd detail is that the man who wrote the notice has inscribed his name, Ocella. In the "o" of the word "Dedication" and winds the whole thing up with a salutation to his beautiful and beloved Nigra, whose likeness he has painted above the salutation.

In another place a hopeless lover laments: "Marcellus loves Proestina and hath no relief from it." Here also is the wise advice of a moralist: "One should imitate and not envy." Another touches us as evidence of the warm friendships of the ancients: "On this spot we two have become brothers, very dear and forever."

But perhaps the most serene of all and the most despairing beneath its profound wisdom is this, written by some unknown philosopher from the depths of his experience. "Nothing can last for eternity. The moon at its full may disappear the next instant; and behold how the sun, which but now arose, is vanishing into the sea."

Moral Effect

It was at the end of the third race and the bookmakers had been doing very badly. Having paid out practically all he had, one bookie found himself confronted by a heft-looking individual, who presented a demand for payment of 5 to 1 in tenners, and just behind this individual was another little man to whom the bookie's liabilities amounted to more than $100. The bookie jumped down and rushed at the bigger fellow:

"I'll see you hanged first!" And with that he hit the claimant a terrific blow which stretched him out.

"An', now, wot do you want?" he yelled, turning to the meek man.

"I—I," spluttered the little chap, as he slipped his ticket back into his pocket. "I—I only came up to say that I thought it served that other chap jolly well right!"

Step on It

Kathryn, aged four, was enjoying her first big trip with her parents. After traveling by automobile, train and boat, they arrived on a Sunday at Mackinaw Island. Her parents decided to go to the little white Mission church to rest and meditate. Kathryn was restless and fidgety. The minister mounted the steps of the pulpit, then stood lost in thought for a moment, as he looked over the waiting congregation. A small impatient voice broke the deathlike silence with this question:

"Mother, what's the matter with the engine? Why don't we start?"

Plant Bankhead Highway

The soldier dead of Jefferson county, Alabama, will be honored by the planting of 800 trees along the Bankhead highway. The trees will be water oaks, and each marked with a tablet. The American Tree association of Washington, D. C., says this planting at Birmingham will be but a starter for the highway's beautification plans. The association sends Tree day programs and tree-planting suggestions to all organizations planting trees.

Canadian Farms

The number of occupied farms in Canada has increased from 511,073 in 1911 to 711,090 in 1921, according to an agricultural census bulletin recently issued. The acreage of occupied farms has increased from 63,422,388 in 1901 to 108,068,715 in 1911 and 140,887,008 acres in 1921. In 1921 there were 63,602 more farms of 200 acres than in 1911, or an increase of 47.90 per cent.

OCEAN'S ONLY
PRECIOUS GEMThe Pearl Is Usually an Insignia of Aristocracy,
a Family Heritage.

Washington.—"Recent sale of a string of pearls for a reported price of more than eleven million francs serves to recall that the pearl is a paradox among precious gems," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"The familiar figure of speech, 'casting pearls before swine,' is no more violent contrast than the fact that a pearl is originated by a parasite."

"As one writer says: 'The ornament associated in all ages with beauty and riches is nothing but the brilliant sarcophagus of a worm.'"

"Certain gems are affected by the newly rich, and sometimes are associated with vulgar display. Not so the pearl—it usually is the insignia of aristocracy, a family heritage above price. Yet a cross-section of a pearl shows it to be structurally just like the humble onion!"

Limestone Deposit.

"In the language of the chemist pearls are 'calcareous concretions of peculiar luster, produced by certain mollusks.' In everyday language, pearls are formed in certain oysters when the oyster secretes and deposits around foreign particles, usually parasites, layer after layer of a limestone substance."

"If this deposit, known as nacreous matter, is spread over the inside of the shell 'mother-of-pearl' is formed; if it is formed on a 'hump' of the shell a 'button pearl' is the result; but if it is built around a parasite 'running loose,' as it were, in the soft part of the mollusk, then a genuine spheric or a pear-shaped pearl is made."

"Now it would occur to an ingenious-minded person that since an oyster tends to protect itself against foreign bodies by exuding nacreous substance around them that the oyster could be encouraged to make pearls to order just as bees are inveigled into making honey. Linnaeus, famous Swedish naturalist, proved to the Western world that insertion of tiny particles in oysters was equivalent to planting pearls but, as with so many of our latter-day 'inventions,' the Chinese had anticipated him by many centuries."

"For generations the 'culture' of pearls was a staple industry of several villages near Tai-Tsung, China. In early spring the 'pearl growers' would collect river mussels, open their valves with a bamboo stick and insert foreign bodies therein. These were placed in shallow pools, nourished by excrement, and after the lapse of months, sometimes of years, the mussels were collected, the pearls extracted, and the soft parts eaten."

"Sometimes the tiny insertions would be in the shape of an image and the result would be a pearl fashioned after the matrix. Among the most remarkable of these oyster art objects were the sitting Buddhas, specimens of which are on display in the British museum."

"India is the world's treasure-house of pearls and the choicest collections of them are owned by native rulers."

A Shawl of Pearls.

"The Gaekwar of Baroda has a sash made of 100 rows of pearls with a tassel of pearls tipped with emeralds. His highness possesses what probably is the most valuable jewel ornament in all the world—a shawl of pearls, ten feet long, six feet wide. This shawl, or rug, literally is woven of strings of pearls and its center and border are set with diamonds. It is worth several millions of dollars."

"A necklace of eight strings of pearls, which are said to be the finest specimens in India, and also worth millions, is owned by the rajah of Dholpur."

"Pearls too tiny for commercial use are known as 'seed pearls.' In India these are ground up, and because of their lime content, chewed with betel nut. The Romans, you will recall, though they prized pearls as ornaments, flavored their wine with powdered pearls."

"The coasts of Ceylon and India are the classic homes of the pearl, in later years the South Sea Islands, Australian waters, the Gulf of California and the Caribbean have yielded pearls."

"The adventures of the pearl fisheries—the India divers who go armed with spikes to fight the sharks and the South Sea women divers who anoint their bodies with oil before they make their plunges—offered fascinating chapters of human custom. But that is another story."

Thirty-Year-Old Will

Dayton, Ohio.—A will thirty years old was admitted to probate the other day by Judge Harry N. Routzahn. It was the will of Mrs. Tazlin H. Lehman, No. 33 South Bell street, who died recently, and it left her $6,000 estate to her husband, Eugene B. Lehman, and their son, Howard. The will was dated June 27, 1894.

Doesn't Need Brains

Chicago.—There's no sense in love. It's been said by a billion or so bachelors and now it's a proved scientific fact. Prof. F. T. Rogers of the University of Chicago is the authority for it. He excised the thinking part of the brains of 200 pigeons and found the billing and cooing went on just as before—until the pigeons died.

BIG FAIR

At Washington C. H. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of This Week.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week, August 13, 14 and 15, the Fayette county fair will offer the public one of the best race meetings ever held in this part of Ohio. Owing to the large number of race horses on the grounds, two large tents in which to stable the had to be erected. The program for the week is as follows:

Wednesday, August 13—2:25 pace purse, $400, 32 entries; 2:30 trot purse $400, 23 entries; 2:17 pace, purse $400, 30 entries.

Thursday, August 14—2:10 pace, purse $400, 14 entries; 2:19 trot, purse $400, 19 entries; 2:14 pace, purse $400, 18 entries.

Friday, August 15—2:20 pace, purse $400, 40 entries; 2:23 trot, purse $400, 22 entries; 2:14 trot, purse $400, 12 entries.

In addition to the high class racing the Boys' and Girls' club exhibits will be very fine and the agricultural industrial, art and amusement departments are overflowing. Many from this locality are expected to attend the Washington fair this week.

INSPECTED ELKS' HOME.

A party of Newark Elks; R. W. Smith, Charles A. Smith, James A. McGonagle, J. F. Cherry, A. L. Thomas and George Hermann, was in the city today inspecting the Elks Home. The Newark lodge has bought the residence of John H. Swisher on North Third street, will convert it into an Elks' home and build lodge rooms in the rear. The location is ideal and when completed the Newark Elks will have from $125,000 to $150,000 invested in their new quarters.

Mr. R. W. Smith is the father of Frank H. Smith. The party was chaperoned by Mr. Cherry.

BASEBALL.

At the Darbyville community park, last Sunday a fast game of baseball was played between the Miller Grocers, of Columbus and the Big Darby Athletic team. The score was 4 to 3 in favor of the Miller Grocers. Wilson, left fielder of the Athletics was the feature player of the game. Downs, of the Athletics, pitched a great game, losing it on account of two errors in the field.

Next Sunday, August 17, the fast colored team known as the Ace of Diamonds, of Columbus, will play the Darby Athletic team at the Community park. This game will be well worth the price of admission.

Wind Watch in Morning

Harry Holton, a watchmaker of Wells River, Vt., has kept a record of watch-spring breakages for a number of years and he has found that 70 out of 75 mainspring breaks occur at night. This is due, he says, to the watch having been warmed by the body all day and when removed at night and wound tight, ensuing contraction causes strain when the spring cools.

Uses for Sulphur

Sulphur is no longer used for making matches. Its principal uses now are in vulcanizing rubber and making gunpowder and sulphuric acid. It is also sprayed on trees to kill the bugs.

AMUSEMENTS

A story of New York and Arizona, of western ranch life and eastern society, is the Paramount picture, "The Call of the Canyon," a screen version of Zane Grey's latest novel, directed by Victor Fleming and featuring Richard Dix, Lois Wilson and Estelle Taylor, which had a highly successful premier at the Met theater last evening.

"The Call of the Canyon" has a double appeal for those who like society dramas, ball room scenes and for those who enjoy virile western dramas. There are many comedy touches throughout the course of the production, with impressive shots of the Arizona cattle country, its mountains and canyons. The love interest is furnished by the featured players as Glenn Kilbourne, an easterner, ordered west for his health, a successful hog raiser; Carley Burch, in love with Glenn, but too greatly attached to the mad society whirl of New York to sacrifice her empty pleasures for the clean wholesome life offered her as Kilbourne's wife; and Flo Hutter, daughter of a sheep rancher who gave Glenn his start in the west, the girl having nursed Kilbourne back to health when it seemed that only a miracle would pull him thru. The climax, following a series of thrilling incidents, is a happy one for all concerned.

Then, too, there is the supporting cast—a handpicked array of stellar players, it might without exaggeration be called. Noah Berry, Ricardo Cortez, Fred Huntley and Lillian Leighton are included among the more prominent players while others are Helen Dunbar, Leonard Clapham, Edward Clayton and Dorothy Seastrom. The picture is fascinating from start to finish.

OFFICIAL SURVEY MADE

Deaths increasing in Coal Mines of United States

Washington, Aug. 12.—Deaths in coal mines of the United States are increasing, according to figures of the federal Bureau of Mines. In the first six months of 1924, 1,302 men were killed in coal mine accidents. The death rate was 4.76 men per million tons of coal mined. In the first six months of 1923, the death rate was 3.91 men per million tons. Explosions of gas and coal dust continue to be the leading causes. Bituminous mines are more dangerous than anthracite. Of the 1,302 killed this year, 1,049 lost their lives in bituminous mines.

PLYMOUTH ROCK IS TARGET FOR BOTTLES

Ancient Landmark Chipped by Souvenir Hunters.

Plymouth, Mass.—Some person or persons, probably the latter, has been throwing champagne bottles at Plymouth rock and they hit it, too, for there are white scars on the face of the panel which bears the date "1620." Samuel Rice, who is the custodian of the rock, the portico over it and the surrounding premises of the commonwealth reservation, made the discovery.

He said the gravelly beach fill around the rock which permits only the upper third of the stone to be seen, was well covered with broken glass, and he knew that six bottles had been used in the bombardment, for he picked up the bottoms and necks of that number and there might have been more, judging by the pieces of glass.

Mr. Rice also says that some relic hunter has stolen a sliver from the rock, and points out what seems to be a freshly broken spot on the weather-worn surface close to which are marks as if some one had done a bit of hammering.

Plymouth Rock was taken from the custody of the Pilgrim society of this town in 1920 by the commonwealth of Massachusetts and is now a ward of the state. It lies about eight feet below the flooring of the portico which covers it and it is possible to walk about three sides of it. The other side is toward the sea and a low arch there allows the waves to wash in when the tide is high enough. Stout metal bars close this opening—partly for it is perfectly possible to creep through beneath the grating, or no feat to climb down from the floor of the portico to reach the rock. That part of the town is almost deserted at night. The conditions are such that a souvenir hunter could easily obtain his desire after dark and be almost safe from interruption.

The old canopy which covered the rock from 1867 to 1920 was provided with tall steel grill gates which were locked at night, and the stone laid in plain view from the street, and not below it as it now does, so marauders had little chance then. Protection of some kind is needed for the stone.

Five Wigs Helped Him Live Two Lives in Paris

Paris.—An amazing double life for four years has been lived by the sixty-three-year-old cashier of the Opera Comique, one of the state theaters of Paris.

This bald-headed little man, who has startled the directors of the theater by confessing to the embezzlement of nearly £7,000, has led for 34 years what is apparently a most regular and respectable married life as a Parisian of the modest middle class on a salary of £20 a month.

He is now discovered to have lived since 1920 a parallel existence in a disguise which no one for a moment suspected.

In this role he would leave the theater at nine o'clock and visit a young woman whom he had taken under his protection, and to whom, in addition to paying her living expenses, he allowed £40 a month pocket money.

At midnight he would return to his "dressing room," take off his disguise and, half an hour later, arrive at the tiny flat where his wife and daughter lived, bearing no sign of his night-metamorphosis into a rich man-about-town.

Married Women Lose Jobs as Germany Retrenches

Berlin.—Twenty-five per cent of the federal employees of Germany have been "laid off" since April 1, in accordance with the economy program embarked upon by the government.

Previous to that date the civil service pay roll showed 825,955 officials, 60,747 office employees and 705,512 manual workers.

The government estimates that this reduction means an annual saving of 15 per cent of the federal budget. The people hardest hit by the retrenchment order were married women. Practically all married women whose husbands have jobs were given notice of termination of employment.

Plays Organ With Snake at Her Feet

Cottonboro, N. H.—Mrs. Anna Enman, wife of the Rev. S. B. Enman, pastor of Cottonboro Methodist church, is the heroine of the town.

Mrs. Enman is the church organist. Just after she took her place at the organ during services the other night, she saw a three-foot green-and-white milk adder coiled up less than four feet away. Her first impulse was to scream, but, fearful that this would break up the service, she kept on playing while the congregation sang, and the snake, soothed by the music, looked on quietly.

Then the pastor began to preach. The snake became restless. Mrs. Enman was scared, but she stuck to her place. Then she played and the snake again was charmed. When the service was over the snake led the way out of the church and later was killed.

WE PRINT THE NEWS

Education Pays in Leadership, Influence and Honors

An investigation published by the United States Bureau of Education shows that of all the people in the United States who have performed distinguished service and received high honors that there was:

- One person out of each 150,000 who had no schooling.
- One person out of each 37,500 with a common school education.
- One person out of each 1,724 with a high school education.
- One person out of each 187 with a college education.

The above lines show the comparative chances of no schooling and with the different grades of education. Parents who give their children a common school education give them four times the chance to become a leader and receive distinction that the child with no schooling has. Those who give their children a high school education give them 87 times the chance, and the parents who sacrifice and give their children a college education give them more than 800 times the chance of the child without schooling.—E. J. Bodman in Banker-Farmer.

ACCIDENT AT DETOUR SIGN.

The Patient Burro

Generations of burros have been so resoundingly beaten that a racial revenge seems to have settled into an irritating indifference to punishment. The instrument of castigation is never less than a club one inch in diameter. The burro has learned to flex its joints when the blow descends so as to break its force. One of them, a young fellow it seemed to be, was once observed to mistime its flex and in consequence received so full a benefit of the blow that it indubitably knocked all future attempts at anticipation from its anatomy.

Rumors are growing louder that the burro will be displaced by the motor car. In that case it will work its own destruction; it will transport the endless variety of material to build the road that will lead to its doom.

Humanity is lagging behind the burro in the race for existence. Whether it finds nourishment in mere philosophical contemplation is an open question. Who has ever seen a burro being fed? A nose-bag would surely stifle it. As for eating, a burro was once observed hastily snatching a banana peel as it loped along with its load and receiving a hollow-sounding whack from the driver by way of gratitude for picking up a living—Lima (Peru) West Coast Leader.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

BIG IMPROVEMENT AT FAIR GROUNDS

More Than $400,000 Expended by State of Ohio.

NEW BUILDINGS CONSTRUCTED

Cattle Barn of Brick and Steel Construction One of the Largest Buildings of Its Type in the Country. New Facilities For Added Convenience of Ohio State Fair Visitors.

Columbus, O.—(Special.)—Visible evidence of the reconstruction and improvement program worked out by Charles V. Truax, director of Ohio's department of agriculture, and G. R. Lewis, state fair manager, is apparent as the time approaches for the opening, Aug. 24, of Ohio's great fall exposition. More than $400,000 have been expended since last fall on new buildings, improvements and facilities for the added convenience of state fair visitors.

The big jobs undertaken in the last year will be completed days before the opening of the 1924 fair.

Most important of this year's improvements is the $250,000 cattle barn. This is an enormous structure, fireproof, of brick and steel construction. Its dimensions are 300 by 350 feet and is the largest building of its type in the United States. Accommodations are provided for 2,000 head of cattle. Steel stall construction has been installed throughout and modern facilities provided for the comfort of blooded animals to be quartered there.

The swine building has been reconstructed and enlarged. It is newly equipped with 900 steel pens. The judging arena has been rebuilt and is flanked on two sides by bleachers. Finishing touches are being put on the new lighting system to cover the 115-acre fair grounds plot. Sixty-nine standards of improved type, each carrying 300-watt lamps, have been distributed advantageously over the grounds. In addition, many suspended lamps have been placed. Most of the wiring for the new system is underground and a transformer station capable of controlling the current distribution has been constructed and equipped with the latest type of machinery.

Throughout the grounds there are many evidences of decorative and artistic improvements. New flower beds, shrubs and plants are flourishing. In the race track oval have been erected two enormous mounds, on the face of which little beddings, plans of three-color variations, spell out these words: "The Sun Always Shines in Ohio," and "Fairs Mark the Progress of Our State."

New gates of brick and cut stone have been erected. The main entrance on Eleventh avenue will provide five passages for automobiles and two for pedestrians.

For the first time in the history of the Ohio State Fair, the management is planning a seven-day exposition. The fair will open Aug. 24 and continue through the following Saturday. The opening day, Sunday, will be dedicated to religious services and musical programs.

Attractions and exhibits will be expanded to harmonize with the enlarged facilities. One of the important features of fair week will be the coronation of the "Ohio State Fair Queen." Elaborate ceremonies are being worked out for this event. The young lady selected for this honor will be chosen by a statewide popularity contest.

Automobile show, the nightly horse show in the Coliseum, harness racing, the pageant-spectacle "Queen Fashion," live stock and farm machinery displays, horticultural and agricultural exhibits—in every particular this year's state fair will surpass in interest and entertainment that of any previous year.

The expansions and improvements just completed mark the beginning of a reconstruction program that is to extend over several years. Director Truax and State Fair Manager Lewis have been securing additional property, necessitated by the growing popularity of the fair. Considerable land has already been secured to the east of the original site and part of this is being cleared for auto parking space.

For Biological Survey

The finest equipment for biological research in the world has been made possible by a gift of $1,400,000 to the Woods Hole (Mass.) Marine Biological laboratory. A combined laboratory and library building to cost about $600,000, will be constructed at once, which, with the present facilities, will form an ideal plant for the institutions interested in this work. The gift was a joint contribution from the Rockefeller foundation, from John D. Rockefeller, Jr., from the Friendship fund endowed by Charles R. Crane, and from the Carnegie corporation. The laboratory was planned on a national co-operative basis, as it is open to all American institutions. During 1923, 70 universities and research organizations contributed to its support.

Pigeon Breeding Popular

Centuries old, pigeon breeding today is said to be the hobby of a million Americans. Beginning with the humble, wild blue rock dove in the days of the Egyptian and Roman empires, inbreeding and crossbreeding have continued until now there are some 300 varieties of fancy pigeons recognized. Particularly responsive to experiments, these birds are being improved and trained as carefully as thoroughbred race horses. It is claimed that a prize winner is more often the result of years of work on the part of some far-seeing fancier than an accidental discovery. So important is hereditly accounted that a blue ribbon bird will bring hundreds of dollars or even a thousand or more. Throughout the centuries, the pigeon has proved to be a steadily increasing factor in the military operations of nations. The development and training of the reliable, sturdy homing pigeon with its keen eyes and powerful wings is now a part of the programs of many countries, for use when other means of communication fail. Built on racing lines, the homer is trained by slow stages to fly unswervingly to a given point from great distances.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Husky Individuals in

Days of the Georges

In an old London inn known as the Sign of the Coffee Mill Mr. E. V. Lucas found a pair of scales on which during a century and a half many notable men were weighed. Ever since the year 1765 records of illustrious and also of regal ponderosity have been kept at the place, which is in St. James street. If you want to know how much Charles Lamb weighed in 1814, writes Mr. Lucas in the "Romance of Old London," I can tell you that when he was thirty-nine years old he turned the scale in his boots at one hundred and twenty-nine pounds, much more than I was expecting. But his boots may have been heavy.

I discovered that Lord Byron, who we know was sensitive about his bulk, was weighed many times, first in 1806, when he was living at No. 8, only five doors away; then he weighed one hundred and ninety-four pounds in his boots. The realization must have distressed exceedingly one who lived in fear of embonpoint even to the extreme of drinking vinegar and generally mortifying the flesh. In 1811 in shoes only—he had got his weight down to one hundred and thirty-seven and a half pounds. Tom Moore seems similarly to have decreased, for in 1807 he was one hundred and forty-six pounds and in 1809 one hundred and twenty-five.

Another famous man, one who also could have had no wish to lose his figure and who will go down in history as much for his insolent question as to the identity of the prince regent—"Who's your fat friend?"—as for his fastidiousness in ties, was Beau Brummell. In 1798 Brummell stood at one hundred and seventy-two pounds in boots, in 1811 at one hundred and ninety-two pounds in boots and frock, and in 1815 at one hundred and seventy-eight pounds in shoes. In 1810 the Beau had to fly from his creditors to Calais. None the less there is still one more entry, in 1822, suggesting that he was able to visit the scenes of his old triumphs again; and then he was one hundred and fifty-three pounds in boots.

As for the "fat friend," later George IV, he evidently earned the epithet. In 1791 he weighed two hundred and forty-two pounds in boots, in 1798 two hundred and twenty-four pounds "after gout," in 1800 two hundred and forty-seven pounds in hat and boots, and later that year two hundred and twenty-nine pounds "after gout." In 1803 "with gout" he weighed two hundred and eighteen pounds.

The figures help us to picture those solid men of a century ago. We can see them trotting or mincing or promading with an air, small and large, down the sunny side of St. James street to weigh themselves before dinner.—Youth's Companion.

Crow Is Denounced as Farmer's Enemy

Investigations of the crow which have taken place recently on a scale wider than ever before have proven that he is one of the most destructive creatures known to useful and game birds, and to poultry and crops. In fact, his depredations are so widespread and fraught with such evil results that sportsmen all over the country are banding together to shoot him so that the game which remains can have a better chance of coming to maturity. A census taken among the game warden in Pennsylvania recently showed that an overwhelming number of the men in the field were positive, from actual observation, of the destructive habits of the crow, and they advised that campaigns be undertaken against him. Some naturalists have claimed that not only directly does the crow damage the farmer, by attacking young poultry and destroying crops, but that indirectly he is vastly more destructive. His indirect work is done when he destroys millions of the eggs of useful birds, and therefore prevents the coming to maturity of these auxiliaries of the farmer who would, had they been allowed to exist, have accounted for myriads of insects. In fact, naturalists have said that the farmer's bill for insecticides would be greatly lowered were the crow prevented from killing useful birds who are the natural enemies of the insect pests.

In the West hunters are employed to kill off the predatory animals which prey on the cattle, and great sums have been saved by their activities. It appears that organized effort against the crow will also save great sums in other parts of the country if this particular menace to bird life is reduced in numbers. The various campaigns against the crow have followed on the heels of the great conservation movement to protect game which is now finding such a response among sportsmen in all parts of the country. With the efforts made to provide proper refuges for useful birds comes the question of protecting their young against the predatory creatures which prey on them.

Man's Mind Ever in

Abject Grip of Fear

Primitive man began his existence on earth under conditions that caused his hair to stand on end a dozen times in the day of thrilling adventures. When he looked around him it was with an anxious, watchful eye for enemies, and an ear strained to catch the howlings of strange beasts.

It was with reluctance he surrendered his consciousness at night, for there was no security about his rude couch. He looked up at the sky with no sense of friendly aid to be sought there, but rather with craven dread of some malign intent in the strange movements of the stars and in the periodic appearance of flaming comets.

Man lived for countless ages with fear at his elbow, and the centuries of his advance in knowledge and culture have not enabled him to rid himself of the monster, says E. V. Odle in P. T.'s and Cassell's Weekly. One result of this is that the language of almost every civilization abounds with taboos and superstitions, while even a good many of the sayings of the great are colored with the emotions of fear.

Science has disposed of superstition, but it has come to understand only a very little more about the emotion of fear. It is only in his head and in his heart that man is sometimes a hero; in the pit of his stomach he is always a coward. Physiologically, the emotion of fear hits us very literally below the belt. It affects the great network of nerves situated under the diaphragm and known as the solar plexus. These nerves are closely associated with all the most vital organs and they control the very pilot upon which the human mechanism works. Hence, the "sinking feeling" that we experience in moments of fear is due to an actual relaxation of the diaphragm itself and the consequent embarrassment of the heart and the pulmonary system.

Science has also discovered that the sense of fear, when it becomes intensified, tends to produce a well-marked condition known in medical terms as a phobia. There are agoraphobia or fear in crowds; monophobia, or fright of being in a confined space; anthrophobia, or fright of society; bathophobia, or fright of things falling; siderodromophobia, or fright of railway traveling.

Many Poisonous Plants

Cattle and other live stock are often made ill by eating poisonous plants which grow wild in their pastures. The magnificent cow parsley, which grows six feet high or more, with its hairy leaves, does cattle no harm, but the hemlock, which looks very like cow parsley, but has smooth leaves and hairless stem, is very poisonous. From this plant the poison was distilled with which the Greek philosopher, Socrates, was put to death.

Tobacco Far North

Tobacco may be grown in every part of Canada, even north of the 55th degree, a bulletin of the Canadian Pacific railway announces. The tobacco plants are grown as are cabbage. When it is felt certain that the last spring frost has occurred, the plants are set out. One Alberta farmer, living well above the 55th degree, has never failed to produce a crop.

Columbus, Aug. 13.—Returns from the statewide primary show that former Governor Harry L. Davis has a commanding lead for the Republican nomination for governor.

On the Democratic ticket Governor Donahey is leading his opponent, James C. B. Beatty of East Liverpool by a 3 to 1 margin. For lieutenant governor Earl D. Bloom was leading the field, with J. K. Fogarty his nearest rival.

In the Republican race for lieutenant governor C. H. Lewis, publisher and banker of Harpster, is leading the field of 13 candidates. State Senator Atwood of Columbus was his nearest rival. The other candidates were trailing far behind.

For the Republican nomination for governor Joseph B. Sieber of Akron, recognized Ku Klux Klan candidate, was running second and James A. White, former superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, was third, and Durand fourth, with the other candidates trailing.

On the Republican ticket returns indicate the nomination of Reynolds R. Kinkade and James E. Robinson for judges of supreme court. J. D. Clark and A. F. O'Neil are leading for the same nominations on the Democratic ticket.

On the Democratic ticket John Henry Newman was nominated for secretary of state. Dan E. Butler of Toledo holds the lead for state auditor and Hamilton Dewese leads for the nomination for state treasurer. For attorney general Thomas H. Morrow of Cincinnati leads B. F. McDonald, prohibition commissioner of Ohio, for the nomination.

Cities of Ohio cast a heavy vote for former Governor Davis, with Joseph B. Sieber, klan candidate, running strong in certain sections. In localities other than klan strongholds C. Homer Durand, light wine and beer candidate, made a good showing.

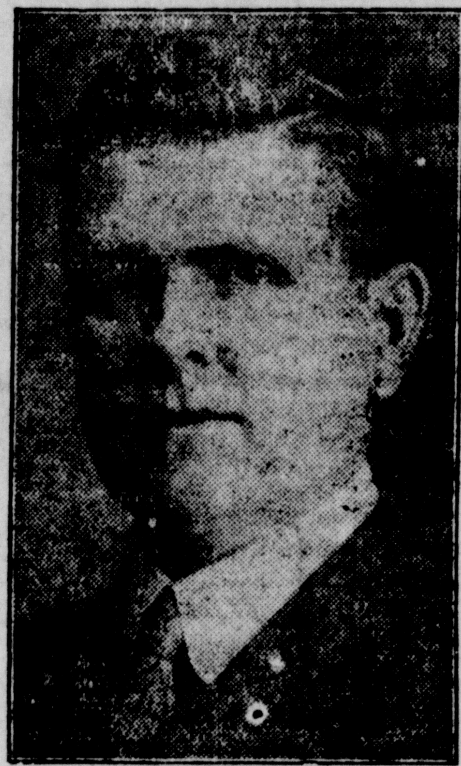

Attorney General Crabbe and Secretary of State Brown, only Republican state office holders with opposition, apparently are safe, although Bert B. Buckley, Dayton, "favorable" to the klan, ran neck and neck with Crabbe in the early returns. Brown has a big lead over Edward J. Hummel of Cincinnati.

James A. White, picked by many of the wise ones for the gubernatorial nomination, ran far behind in the cities, and friends of White hoped the rural vote would pull him ahead.

Unopposed Republican candidates for the nomination for other state offices were Joseph T. Tracy for state auditor, and Harry S. Day for treasurer of state.

A. V. DONAHEY

Renominated by Ohio Democrats for Governor.

Harry L. Davis has been nominated for governor by a margin of not less than 60,000 votes, according to a statement issued at Davis headquarters. He has carried Hamilton, Cuyahoga, Franklin, Lucas and Montgomery counties, the statement said.

In Franklin county in the race for nomination for congress on the Republican ticket, John C. Speaks distanced J. J. Tisdale. John H. Arnold ran a poor third. On the Democratic ticket for the same office Lowry F. Atter won the nomination, his vote being slightly more than twice that of William D. Fulton.

A charter amendment was approved by Columbus voters. It proposes to submit public utility franchise ordinances to voters.

Donahey received 66,263 votes in 1,254 precincts. Beatty received 16,542 for lieutenant governor. Black had 12,120; Bloom 35,634; Fogarty 12,416; Krause 12,268.

Davis in 3306 precincts received 57,743; Sieber 37,691; White 29,723; Durand 29,816; Burke 14,048; Harris 7,766; Cable 7,981; Smith 5,279. For lieutenant governor, Lewis received 5,884; Atwood 21,206; Galbreath 9,884.

TO RESUME FLIGHT

American Aviators Scheduled to Hop Off Tomorrow.

London, Aug. 13.—A radio from Reykjavik, states that the American around-the-world fliers expect to hop off for Greenland tomorrow on the next lap of their flight. A wireless dispatch received from the Danish ship Gertrude Rask, which is to serve as a supply ship for the fliers, said she had broken through the ice at the bay of Angmagssalik, Greenland, and that the waters are now open. This assures the fliers of a landing place. The two American aviators, Lieutenants Lowell Smith and Eric Nelson, were jubilant when the word was received. They have been at Reykjavik, Iceland, for about a week. The fliers plan to hop from their present base in Iceland 750 miles to Fredericksdahl, Greenland.

STATE HAS INNING IN FRANKS CASE

Begins Presentation of Its Evidence in Rebuttal.

SLAYERS' RELATIVES TESTIFY

Questioned by Defense in a Final Effort to Strengthen Its Case—Testimony Offered to Show That the $10,000 Ransom Was Not the Prime Motive for the Murder—Defense Rests Its Case.

Chicago, Aug. 13.—The defense rested in the hearing of Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb for the murder of Robert Franks after members of the Leopold-Loeb families testified in an effort to strengthen the case of the slayers.

Allen Loeb, brother of Richard, who followed Jacob Loeb, an uncle, on the stand, identified two letters, one written to Richard by Mrs. Ira Struthers, his childhood governess, and one written by Leopold to Loeb. The letter from the governess showed deep affection for Loeb and Leopold's letter to Loeb divulged a certain pathological incident in their lives.

Foreman Leopold, brother of Nathan, testified that Nathan from the time he was a small boy was intensely interested in churches of all description.

Nathan's brother testified that Nathan was given an automobile by his father, who also paid all of its upkeep. He said Nathan's university tuition, in fact every debt he ever had, was paid by his millionaire father, Nathan Leopold, Sr., president of the Morris Paper Box Company. Nathan said the father agreed to supply the necessary $3,000 for a European trip.

This testimony was introduced by the defense in an attempt to show that the desire for the $10,000 ransom was not the prime motive for the killing of Robert Franks.

State's Attorney Crowe gave Dr. Harold S. Hurlbert, alienist, a merciless cross-examination. Through adroit questioning, Crowe led the witness into a number of clashing assertions.

"Is there any pathology about Richard Loeb?" Crowe asked. "Yes, there is much of a pathological nature about Loeb," the witness replied, and he went into the matter with much detail.

"Doctor I shall now read to you a section of your report on this phase," Crowe said. "Your summary on this question reads: 'No marked pathology.' This is your summary, is it not?" "Yes, that is mine," the doctor answered.

"Now, doctor, on this matter of the proposed kidnapping of Tommy, Richard's youngest brother," Crowe continued, "you say that Loeb was just joking, didn't you?" "I said that he was joking, but I also said there was some degree of sincerity in it."

Dr. Hurlbert said Loeb was disappointed because he didn't get the thrill or "kick" out of killing Robert Franks that he expected. He said Dick told him he was ashamed of the awkward way in which he conducted the crime.

Here Crowe swung back to his line of attack on the lack of emotions. He forced the witness to admit that Loeb had said it made him sad to see women in pain, that it made him sad to have Mrs. Franks in pain over the death of Robert and that he said he felt sorry for causing his family pain.

"These are emotions, are they not?" Crowe asked. "Yes," the doctor replied.

Crowe asked the witness to give some example of defective judgment in Loeb. The doctor gave several instances, and then said: "After committing his perfect crime, in killing Robert Franks, Loeb planned to take up the life of a gentleman burglar." Loeb planned to pursue this new life along Chicago's "gold coast," the doctor said.

The state began presenting its rebuttal evidence, with a list of 50 witnesses, including five alienists to select from.

Missing Girl Found.

Frostburg, Md., Aug. 13.—Mary Kathryn Mitchell, 4, who was "kidnaped" Sunday, was found sitting on a rock in the woods, about three miles from where she disappeared. The child was found by four members of the posse that had scoured the entire section for her. With the exception of scratches she was unharmed.

THE WEATHER.

Ohio—Thursday—Generally fair.

Wins Republican Nomination for Governor of Ohio.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Asks Donahey to Resign.

Columbus, Aug. 13.—Republican state headquarters issued a statement calling upon Governor Donahey to resign, as a result of alleged waste of public funds in the construction of highways throughout the state. "The cost of road construction in Ohio has reached the astonishing figure of $40,372 per mile," the statement said. "The time for Governor Donahey to resign is right now. A contract was let for sheet asphalt construction on a road in Hancock county at the rate of $92,063 per mile."

Found in Box Car.

Cincinnati, Aug. 13.—Charles Hunter and wife of Batesville, Ind., were found starving in a box car on the Big Four railroad tracks here. They were sent to a hospital for medical treatment. Hunter told hospital authorities that he and his wife left home after he had been unable to obtain work.

Two Workers Asphyxiated

Steubenville, O., Aug. 13.—Tony Greenti, 36, and Theodore Green, 22, both of Steubenville, were asphyxiated while repairing a blast furnace when leaking gas flooded the compartment in which they were working. Four other workmen were taken from the compartment unconscious, but were revived.

Regains Her Memory.

Cleveland, Aug. 13.—Amnesia that blotted out several hours in the life of Martha Kenealy, 22, of Youngs town, has lifted and her life once more has resumed its normal course. But she does not remember what happened during those hours in which her memory was befogged.

Teacher Kills Self.

Cleveland, Aug. 13.—Miss Belle Bernah, 26, teacher in Case public school, committed suicide by slashing her throat and both of her wrists, in her home here. Miss Bernah, according to officers, had been suffering from a nervous disorder.

Prisoners Escape.

Athens, O., Aug. 13.—Eleven prisoners escaped from the county jail here. They sawed their way to liberty. After squeezing out of the window the men dropped to the ground by means of blankets converted into a rope.

Abandoned Babe Found.

Cincinnati, Aug. 13.—A young woman found a baby boy, apparently two weeks old, in a basket in the vestibule of St. Xavier's church, largest Catholic church in the city. No marks of identification could be found.

Policeman Exonerated.

Cincinnati, Aug. 13.—Patrolman Fred W. Bartlett was exonerated in the shooting and killing last night of a man in a gun battle. Police wounded another man when he attempted to escape after having been arrested.

Farmer Killed At Crossing.

Steubenville, O., Aug. 13.—Watt Howard, 60, prominent farmer, was instantly killed when the machine in which he was riding was struck by a Pennsylvania flyer near Fernwood. The machine was hurled 60 feet.

Siege Abandoned.

Denver, Aug. 13.—Three postoffice inspectors, headed by Martin Wenger and the force of county paid armed guards who have been on duty at the Palisade mine in quest of three fugitives suspected of the $15,508 robbery of the Palisade postoffice on Aug. 2, have withdrawn. No further guards will be stationed at the mine because of the belief that the fugitives, if still within the mine, are dead or otherwise have managed to escape.

AMERICAN POLICY UNCHANGED

Negotiations With Russia Not Possible at This Time.

COOLIDGE SANGUINE, HOWEVER

Is Desirous of Establishing Closer Political Bonds With Moscow and Is Hopeful the Time Is Near at Hand When Negotiations May Be Possible—Russia First Must Alter Her Policy.

Washington, Aug. 13.—It was announced at the state department that there is no present indication of negotiations looking to the resumption of diplomatic relations between Washington and Moscow.

The policy of the United States toward Russia has undergone no change, officials said, despite the recent recognition of the Russian soviet government by Great Britain and other world powers.

It was stated, however, that President Coolidge is desirous of establishing closer political bonds with Russia and is hopeful that the time is near at hand when negotiations may be possible. The chief stumbling block to any negotiations or political intercourse at this time rests in the refusal of the soviet government to accomplish, according to the president, "works mete with repentance" as a basis for recognition.

The United States, it was declared officially, does not propose to deal through diplomatic channels with Russia until the soviet recognizes her international obligations, including the $233,000,000 debt of the Russian republic formed after the fall of the czarist government. The position of this government continues to be, also, that there can be no political relations between Russia and the United States so long as the soviet maintains its active spirit of enmity to our institutions.

This is the Russian policy formulated by Secretary of State Hughes during the Harding administration and now continued by President Coolidge.

COOLIDGE LOOKS OVER THE AUDITORIUM

Plans Perfected for Notification Exercises.

Washington, Aug. 13.—President Coolidge, it was announced, will devote most of his attention to his office during the campaign.

Chairman Butler of the Republican national committee has been going over the campaign plans with the president the last few days and is ready to take up the final program with members of the national committee who will be here for the notification exercises.

In company with the national committee chairman, Mr. Coolidge looked over for a few minutes the auditorium in which the exercises will be held—Memorial Continental Hall, national home of the Daughters of the American Revolution and located near the white house. Plans have been made to carry the addresses to every section of the country east of the Rocky mountains by radio and it is estimated an audience of 25,000,000 will listen in.

The exercises will start at 8 o'clock Eastern standard time, at the call of Mr. Butler, who will preside.

HERE AND THERE

Patrolman W. F. Hodges and Sam Russell, colored, shot and killed each other in a pistol duel at Savannah, Ga. A colored man who intervened, was shot and perhaps fatally wounded. Dr. Otto Weidfeldt will soon resign as German ambassador to Washington and return to Germany.

Roy Stiles, 30, pilot, and Murray Pannini, passenger, were killed when an airplane fell 1,000 feet into the ocean off San Luis Obispo, Cal. Congressman E. B. Howard, defeated by former Governor Walt in the Oklahoma primary race for the Democratic senatorial nomination, will ask recount.

Mrs. Wolcott W. Ellsworth, 52, wife of the rector of St. John's Episcopal church at Johnstown, N. Y., committed suicide by inhaling gas.

VETERANS MARCH

More Than 8,000 Pass the Reviewing Stand at Boston.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 13.—The veterans of Antietam and Bull Run, their ranks fast disintegrating, paraded through a cold rain here in the fifty-eighth annual encampment of the G. A. R. It was a proud, gray haired and somewhat feeble file of veterans which plodded down the streets, to tunes of '61 and '65.

Some 8,000 men of the blue joined in the parade. About 3,000 of these marched while the rest rode in autos. Thousands gathered along the streets to pay homage to the last of the veterans of the civil war.

In the reviewing stands sat more than a thousand veterans who had come to participate in perhaps their last encampment—sitting in the stands because they could not stand the rigor of the parade, but when the colors went by they never failed to rise and stand at "attention."

Decision Soon to be Announced.

London, Aug. 13.—Premier Herriot of France announced here that the decision of the German, French and Belgian delegates on the Ruhr evacuation problem will soon be communicated to the reparations conference. This is the question which has brought negotiations to a standstill, and until the problem is solved there can be no progress towards closing up the program for the inauguration of the Dawes plan.

ON DEFENSE TEST DAY

Donahey to Issue Orders for Mobilization of Guards.

Columbus, Aug. 13.—Governor Donahey will issue orders for the mobilization of the Ohio National guard at its local armories on defense test day, Sept. 12, it was announced at the governor's office following a meeting of the defense day committee. No proclamation will be issued by the governor calling upon local communities to join in the observance of the day, but the governor's state committees will co-operate with local committees in the matter of civilian observance and patriotic demonstrations.

The National guard units will assemble at their armories on the evening of Sept. 13, and the mobilization period will supplant the usual weekly drill period, Adjutant General Henderson said, in announcing his plans for co-operation with the federal government.

Menaced By Forest Fires.

San Francisco, Aug. 13.—The transcontinental line of the Southern Pacific railroad and wire communications are threatened by a forest fire burning near Floriston in the higher levels of the Sierra Nevada mountains. The fire was reported burning fiercely on both sides of the railroad along with the wire lines run, with a high wind frustrating all efforts at control.

Woman Killed By Train.

Toledo, Aug. 13.—Johanna Dittman of Milbury, Wood county, was killed instantly when struck by a train near her home. She was walking along the tracks, to visit some friends.

Mary Stuart Cutting, author of "The Wayfarers," "Lovers of Sanna," "Heart of Lynn" and other books, died at Dronge, N. Y.

Woodpeckers and Putty

The theory of ornithologists that the woodpecker pecks for worms and insects alone has lately been upset. There is a water tank in Sully, Iowa, that supplies the town's water. In 1922 woodpeckers drilled so many holes through the wooden sides of the tank that the insulation against freezing was demolished. These holes were puttied over, and the putty was afterward painted. But in the summer of 1923, the persevering woodpeckers pecked all the paint and putty out of the tank.

In a late cold spell in Sully, the water supply suddenly gave out. Upon investigation, the tank was found to be full of ice, and the putty all gone. Mayor Fred Andreas has decided that the old plant will have to be torn down and a peck-proof one erected in its place. It is now left to ornithologists to explain why the woodpecker prefers putty to wood—or grubs.

Then He Wound the Cat

We've all heard about the absent-minded professor who poured the sirup down his back and scratched his pan-cake, but the one that worries us is the one who poured catsup on his shoelace and tied his spaghetti.—Gargoyle.

Grandfather's Stomach

Vivian, age three, was busily engaged in putting her dolls to bed. Her grandfather, who has been having trouble with his stomach, entered the room and mournfully exclaimed: "I just don't know what is the matter with me; my stomach is all torn to pieces."

Vivian thought for a moment, then ran downstairs to her aunt and said: "Hasn't grandpa got any stomach?" Her aunt, very much surprised at the question, said: "Why, sure he has a stomach." Vivian said: "Why, I just heard him say it was all torn up."

Faint Heart

"Faint heart never won fair lady," said the ready-made philosopher. "That's right," answered the bashful man. "The way the ladies dress sometimes you've got to have your nerve with you to look at one long enough to feel acquainted."

Sensational Dancer

Lolo Montez, a Spanish dancer, stirred Europe and America with her adventures during the first half of the Nineteenth century. After many escapades in Europe she came to the United States in 1851, and died here in 1907.

Wrong Mental Attitude; How We Get That Way

The Boss had just taken his head off when the telephone on his desk rang. Now he could let off steam! The Old Man thought he could call a fellow down just for being late in the morning, did he! And the whole office laughing behind his hand! Well, it was as much as his job was worth to answer back the Old Man—but anyone who was fool enough to telephone at that particular moment would get what was coming to him! Then he heard his wife's voice.

"I'm very busy; make it snappy," was his first response. Then: "Stop on the way home for the meat? Confound it, I wish you'd run the house without making me errand boy! Can't you do it by yourself? What! What! Hello . . . She's rung off. Now she's mad, I suppose."

And after that remorse set in. As he turned the corner to his own door a florist's sign caught his eye: "Say it with flowers." Why not, he thought to himself. For a dollar—no, fifty cents—he could smooth things over and life would be comfortable again. How he did hate upsets! And today had been nothing but upsets.

Then the florist began it all again. No, he could not give the gentleman a dozen red roses for half a dollar—in fact, the roses were 75 cents apiece. No, violets cost even more. But he had some pink carnations that weren't quite fresh—that is, not as fresh as the other flowers—the gentleman could have those at his price. And the gentleman took them all done up in a box with a lot of asparagus.

His latch key was out half way up the steps and he sailed in as if nothing had happened—that was the best tactics, he told himself—and, with the smile of conscious virtue, he presented the glorified package without a word. But wife had known him for five years and she opened the offering with reservations. And when she thanked him he suddenly began to wonder if she had perhaps seen his pink carnations on her way to market every day for a week. But then it was too late.

How do we get that way? This is the mental attitude that puts a new coat of white paint on a house that needs to have its foundations re-vised.

Classifying Milton

Julius was a well-brought-up child and when he went to visit Milton who just ran wild and did all the things a boy shouldn't do, he was greatly surprised and he said to his mother: "Why, I don't believe Milton ever does anything but don't's."

Creatures That Laugh

Human beings are not the only creatures that have a sense of humor. Some animals have a keener sense of humor than some human beings. The hyena laughs, many dogs laugh, and most monkeys laugh. A sense of fun is not a human monopoly.

Luxuries Are Comparative

When two prisoners were asked to name their reward for submitting to blood transfusions at Sing Sing, one asked for stewed chicken and the other for a bowl of spaghetti. The transfusion was made in an effort to save the life of a fellow prisoner.

Pawning Is Popular

Many London society women habitually pawn their jewels and other precious possessions when they are going on a trip. Not wishing to leave their valuables in an empty house, they put them in a pawnshop, where they are assured of good care.

Out of Date Quickly

The Oxford dictionary is far from complete, writes Ernest Weekly in the Atlantic Monthly. You will search it in vain for "aspidistra" and "appendicitis," "boche" and "bolshivist," "cinema" and "camouflage," "decontrol" and "Dora," "broadcasting" and "listening-in," "bootlegging," and "dope fiend," for a dictionary published today is almost out-of-date tomorrow.

Foolish Ambition

It is an indiscreet and troublesome ambition that cares so much about fame; about what the world says of us; to be always looking in the faces of others for approval; to be always anxious about the effect of what we do or say; to be always shouting to hear the echoes of our own voices.—Longfellow.

Politeness

Little Johnny was to be taken to the movies, and as they were on their way his mother told him to be sure to be polite in everything he said. After they were seated, Johnny found that the man's head in front of him obstructed his view. Remembering to be polite, Johnny said: "Please, sir, won't you pull in your neck about six inches?"

Wanted to Feel Safe.

Little Adam was staying at a neighbor's home during the illness of his mother. The neighbor lady knowing Adam's fondness for jelly had some for supper one evening. All during the meal he watched his jelly. As he was about to eat it he said: "Oh, Lord, be near me while I eat this nervous stuff."

Something New and Different

HERRICK REFRIGERATORS

The Big Difference In Refrigerators

The main object of any refrigerator, of course, is the preservation of foods. The refrigerator that will keep foods in perfect condition longest is naturally the refrigerator you want—provided it doesn't increase your ice bills.

The Herrick answers those requirements with facts—not claims. And it does even more. It actually decreases your ice bills while giving you more effective food preservation.

And why? Simply because the Herrick is far more than an ice box—far more than a cold storage place. It is built on the scientifically demonstrated principle that more than merely cold air is necessary to keep foods in good condition for any great length of time.

Perhaps the biggest essentials to scientifically correct refrigeration are—

- No. 1. Circulation of cold dry air.
- No. 2. Effective insulation.
- No. 3. Air-tight construction.

That the Herrick has these necessary essentials is a demonstrated fact.

Many proofs of the truth are visible even to the least informed purchaser. Others are hidden within the walls of the refrigerator, but nevertheless there, performing their functions so important to good health and economy.

NEW SPARK PLUGS CUT CAR EXPENSE

Savings in Oil and Gas More Than Pay for Devices and Power Is Better.

Very careful experiments by motor manufacturers have proved that it is actual waste and unfair to a motor car to run it more than a year with the same set of spark plugs.

Thousands of motorists have found that a new set of plugs after 8,000 to 10,000 miles, running not only make better performances certain but actually save oil and gas to more than pay for the new spark plugs.

Real Economy.

Why it is real economy to do this is easily understood when the part spark plugs play in engine operation is definitely known. In the engines used in motor cars today, the charge is fired in each cylinder at every other revolution of the crank shaft. This means that the spark plugs are called on to deliver the firing spark from 600 to 1,500 times per minute, according to the speed of the engine.

The temperature around the firing points runs from 600 degrees up to 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit, the average being around 1,200. In most motors, oil is being continuously splashed on and burned off the spark plug. This tremendous heat and stress, due to the hammer-like blows of the compression and firing strokes, gradually affect the efficiency of the spark plug, no matter how well made it may be. The oil adheres to the surface of the core affecting its insulating properties and allowing for surface leakage which weakens the spark after a long period of service.

Full Power Not Secured.

Full power is not secured from the gasoline consumed. The engine becomes sluggish. Acceleration is slower. It lacks pull on the hills. The unconsumed gasoline seeps by the pistons and dilutes the oil in the crank case, affecting lubrication and many times causing serious injury to the working parts. This process is so slow that the motorist rarely notices it. But the operation is actually about the same as driving with a partially retarded spark. The installation of a new set of spark plugs is actually a revelation to the motorists. The difference in engine operation is so marked as to be unmistakable. Power and pickup are better. There is more speed. Engine operation is improved in every way. And the motorist actually saves the cost of the new spark plugs in oil and gasoline in the first 1,200 to 1,500 miles of running.

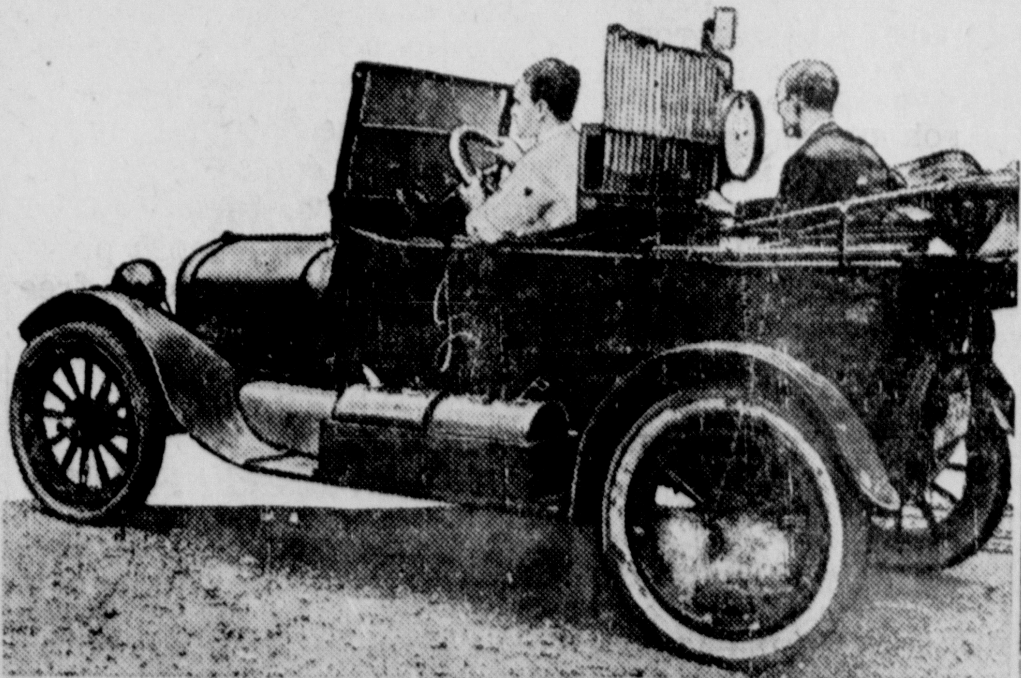

"Make Run" in Climbing Hill With Heavy Trucks

Unless the road surface is too rough to warrant it, the best way to climb a hill is "make a run" at it. Climbing hills in this manner not only makes use of the momentum of the truck, but it avoids overheating the engine, which is often the result of running in low gear for any considerable distance. Low gear should be resorted to on a hill, when the engine, with open throttle, slows down so low that its operation becomes labored and jerky or it commences to knock. The maximum safe speeds of trucks are in general, quite low in comparison with those of passenger cars, especially if the former are geared very low and are equipped with solid tires. A truck should never be driven so fast that its engine vibrates excessively.

Testing Quality of Oil Is Very Important Task

The practice of draining off a little of the crankcase oil to examine it and decide whether all the oil should be discarded is not good. The heaviest portion of the oil naturally goes to the bottom, and as the drain plug is always at the bottom of the crankcase, the oil the motorist drains off is no index of the general condition of the lubricant. The best plan is to make the test after the engine has been warmed up, drawing off about a quart. If it is in excellent shape, and if no fresh oil is handy, it can be poured back.

GASOLINE FAMINE TO ALTER CAR STYLES

Anticipating a gasoline shortage due to the increase in the number of motor cars and the decrease in the production of crude oil, the bureau of standards of the Department of Agriculture has made a series of tests to determine how a poorer grade of motor fuel, which will eventually be placed on the market, will affect present-day motors. The decrease in the amount of crude oil being produced and the increase in the demand for gasoline will necessitate radical changes in automobile designing.

Listening Rod Detects

When a noise occurs in the timing gears it can easily be distinguished by a loud ringing or humming sound, and can easily be detected by sounding the timing gear case with a listening rod or stethoscope. It is generally caused by worn bearings or gear teeth and in some cases by wearing which causes the gears to mesh improperly. It is frequently evident after the main bearings have been refitted, since this may change the gear centers and cause the gear teeth to mesh deeper.

Appliance for Holding Beads of Tire Casings

A piece of 3/8-inch rod, bent to the shape shown, is a handy appliance for holding the beads of a tire casing apart while making interior repairs, or patching. In addition, if made the correct size, it will serve as an inflation-test gauge. To accomplish this, pump the tire up to the right pressure, and measure the casing directly under the wheel hub, with the weight of the car resting on the axle. The distance between the points will not, of course, be standard for all tires, but will depend on the size of the tire being measured. A gauge of this kind has perhaps no great accuracy, but is far cheaper than the dial type, and as it only applies to one size, it is less likely to be stolen. Also, it is a much simpler operation to caliper the tires than to unscrew the cap and apply the pressure gauge.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

When Going Over Tires Carefully Examine Extra

When you are looking over the tires on your car don't forget the spare you are carrying behind. Unless it is covered to protect it from light, water, oil and heat, it will rapidly deteriorate. These four enemies of rubber will take the life out of any rubber product in a short time.

It is important to make sure that the spare tire is fastened tightly to the carrier. If there is any play in the fastenings there will be constant rubbing against the casing and consequent injury to it.

Once in a while a few drops of oil should be placed on the detachable rim bolts. Oil should also be used when an old tire has rusted to the rim and refuses to give up its hold. But when oil is used, carefully wipe it off the tire before the job is finished.

Keep Record of Mileage for Claim Adjustment

When you get a new tire you figure that it is guaranteed to give a definite amount of service. One of the first things you need to know, if a tire gives out and you contemplate making a claim for adjustment, is how many miles that tire has gone. Do you guess at the mileage, thinking you put the tire on at about such a speedometer registration? Do you take account of changes when a spare goes on while another tire is repaired?

The only way to be sure about tire mileage is to record it. Do this on a card or a slip of paper or right on the wall of the garage. When you put on a tire, set down its number and the mileage record when it goes to service. If it comes off for a time, make record of the mileage to date and a new record when it goes on again.

Mexico's Largest Pyramid

The pyramid at Cholula, west of the city of Puebla and about 60 miles southeast of Mexico City, is the largest in Mexico. Its base is 1,400 feet square and the altitude is 200 feet. Its volume is 130,000,000 cubic feet. This pyramid in Mexico has a greater number of cubic feet of masonry, although it is not so high, than the great pyramid in Egypt.

Afternoon Frock That Will Interest Women

Crystal plaited chiffon, beneath all-over embroidery in gold color, is used to make this charming afternoon gown, ornamented with girdle and rosette of white beads.

To Dress and Look Cool on Sultry Summer Days

Life nowadays is altogether too much fussed-up. We all admit it. But you have no idea how, taking your courage in hand, you can pull off the silly old outer coverings, and get at something tolerably simple. Just for one example, observes a writer in the Woman's Home Companion: If your hair is hot and heavy on your head and hard to keep in order, cut some of it out. Don't be afraid. Maybe your husband does admire it. He doesn't have to take care of it.

The first thing to do if you have long heavy hair is to shorten it. What's the use of carrying around a lot of old hair, anyway? It just wads up in a bunch on your head and acts like a warming pan. But if your hair grows thickly on your head, shortening doesn't cool you off very much. My suggestion then is that you have some one thin it out for you carefully, much as you'd thin out the carrot row in the early summer. Cut small pieces out close to the scalp in several places, being careful to take it from underneath where the cut-out regions will be well concealed by your coiffure. Don't cut the hair that grows low on the neck.

Delightfully refreshing for hot weather, too, are the scented hair lotions which have all the cooling virtues of toilet water but are especially adapted for the hair. A few drops on your scalp around the edges of the hair seem to take away that hot, damp feeling.

Baths are one thing that you can't very well cut down in hot weather. But any day, you know, you can save enough puttering or worry time for one good bath. And what a boon a bathtub is in hot weather—a bathtub filled without skimping, and smelling like a lemon meringue all on account of a handful of verveine bath salts. Filling a tub, however, one can still be cool. A hand basin of water, an ordinary wash cloth, and a spoonful of toilet water makes a sponge bath that takes off several degrees of heat. And just an ordinary air bath, sans clothes, is a wonderful freshener. It's a very good thing, especially in summer, to remove your clothes for a little while each day, and let your pores get a good, deep breath of air.

Lace Mitts Take Place in Fashions of Summer

Like a remnant of finery from the fashions of olden times are the pretty lace mitts that have suddenly become the last word in summer styles. Of course, old ladies have always worn mitts, and the more conservative shops have continued to humor their fancy and retain their patronage. But the revival of mitts had a definite starting point in an English wedding at which the bride wore long mitts of exquisite white lace and the bridesmaids shorter mitts of silk in an open lace pattern, of a delicate shade of maize, matching their gowns.

This summery suggestion has been repeated in the costumes at some recent weddings in fashionable society this side of the water, the mitts being usually of elbow length and always matching the costume. They are shown in many lovely shades, in stripes and other openwork patterns; in plain colors of glove silk, black or white, and some are stitched with bright contrasts. One of the choicest styles is a glove of lacy silk of one color trimmed at the wrist with a wee plaiting of ribbon, piped with scarlet, blue, black or green. The black and white combinations are especially smart.

Red Much in Favor

Everywhere one sees much red used, not only for hats but for entire frocks. Sports frocks of red crepe de chine or flat crepe are most attractive and, as a rule, have a scarf of the same material. Some of the newer scarfs are made of crepe in a solid color with a wide border of a contrasting shade at each end. With a frock of white crepe de chine there was a scarf of white with an extremely wide band of red.

SUDDEN DEATH

Lifeless Body of Henry Hammel Found in Bed—Funeral Saturday.

Henry Hammel died suddenly at his home this morning at about 4:30 o'clock. His housekeeper and niece, Mrs. Elizabeth Huff, found him dead in bed about 6:30 o'clock.

The deceased was born in this city, November 17, 1837, and was a son of George and Magdalena Funk Hammel, pioneer residents of Circleville.

Mr. Hammel married Miss Elizabeth R. Johnson in December, 1873. His wife died several years ago.

Of his immediate family, he leaves one brother and one sister, Charles L. Hammel, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Mrs. Alda C. Kimmey, of Versailles, Kentucky.

Mr. Hammel was a cabinet maker by occupation. After retiring, he was appointed truant officer for the public schools, a position he filled for twenty-five years.

The funeral services will be held at his late home Saturday morning at ten o'clock. Rev. S. W. Hiles will officiate. Burial in Forest cemetery.

The minister will read three hymns; "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" and "Rock of Ages." The pallbearers will be Charles L. Hammel, George E. Hammel, L. C. Hammel and Kemper M. Hammel.

RECORD EGG LAYERS.

W. L. Mason, postmaster at Orient, claims record on pullets laying at an early age for his breed. He has pullets he purchased of R. H. Anderson, Lynchburg, Virginia, the man that sold his leading pen at Madison Square Garden, New York, last winter for $500 to Tex Richards. The pullets were hatched March first and laid the first egg July 27, aged four months and 27 days. They are S. C. Black Minorcas.

Dr. Syntax Was Stern Student, but Milly Won

By ELMER PHILLIPS

(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

DOCTOR SYNTAX was not more than forty, though he seemed bowed beneath the weight of his recidive investigations.

When Aloysius Benton, his friend and colleague, died, ten years before, leaving his twelve-year-old daughter to Doctor Syntax, it was the most natural thing in the world that the kindly old doctor should take the child into his household. After old Janet died, Milly quite naturally became the doctor's housekeeper.

And now certain persons had whispered that it was not proper for an unmarried man, even a professor, to live alone in the house with the girl.

Doctor Syntax had been in love when he was a young man. The object of his devotion had married another; but, though he had long ceased to think of her, the memory of that first love had clung around him like a radiant cloud, softening his spirit and fitting it for high idealism. Sometimes the thought of Milly had, of late, revived that memory.

But when the ultimatum went forth that society considered Milly ought to be relegated to another sphere, the professor had a ridiculous dream. It was absurd, to hope that Milly, the belle of the little town . . . and he an old fogey of forty!

At any rate, he must tell Milly. And he did so, when he met her in the library after dinner, which the professor always took alone.

"My dear," he said, "I have an unpleasant thing to say to you. It is a problem—"

"Can't you solve it by algebra?" inquired Milly, looking at him with a twinkle in her eyes. "You know, you always say everything can be solved by algebra."

"And so it can, my dear," said Doctor Syntax.

"You remember how you found your spectacles," pursued Milly mischievously.

"But this is serious, Milly," said Doctor Syntax. "Some people in this town have apparently been putting their heads together and have come to the conclusion that it is not right for a single girl, even an adopted daughter, to keep house for an old bachelor like me. It is a preposterous idea, but the force of public opinion is like the symbol X, always handed when it is not wanted and never translatable into precise terms until the final solution."

"Well, I have come to the same conclusion myself," said Milly calmly.

"What!" exclaimed Doctor Syntax. He had expected a scene, strife, war—and here was Milly calmly acquiescing in his decision. "But what are you going to do, my dear?" he continued. "I can't bear the thought of losing you."

"You needn't lose me," said Milly, with preternatural gravity, studying her plate. But even then there was a mischievous twinkle in her eyes.

"This is very strange, my dear," said Doctor Syntax. "You have accepted the public opinion as to the inadvisability of your remaining here as my housekeeper, and yet you say that I need not lose you. Logically, that implies that you could propose to remain here in some other capacity; and yet I fail to see what that could be, or how it could affect public opinion—"

"Which we have designated X," said Milly, raising her eyes to the professor's for one fleeting moment. And in that moment the professor felt strangely disconcerted, and yet strangely glad. Unconsciously he threw back his shoulders.

"Well, my dear, suppose the variants are Y and Z," he said. "Now we have an indeterminate equation. X equals Y or Z multiplied by the unknown factor, which shall be N."

"Why not make it U?" asked Milly. "Make it U, Milly? The letter U is never used in mathematics except when the other letters of the alphabet have been almost exhausted."

"I should really prefer you to make it U," persisted Milly.

"Very well. U it shall be, then," said the professor.

"Oh, I'm afraid that would never do," said Milly. But, seeing that the professor was only staring at her in perplexity, she resigned herself. "Very well! Go on," she said.

"It is obvious, then, that X equals YU or ZU," said Doctor Syntax, warming to his task.

"YU," I think," said Milly gravely.

"In that case," said the professor, X, the unknown factor, equals Y divided by U. Now, algebra helps us no more unless we can state U in positive terms. Now let E be the possibility of your remaining here in the capacity of—secretary, let us say, and F the possibility of becoming—let us say my stenographer. Then U equals—"

"YF," said Milly, triumphantly.

"Eh?" asked Doctor Syntax. "No, my dear, it couldn't equal YF, because—"

"Then I shall go," said Milly, rising from her chair, and the professor was amazed to hear a strangled sob.

"Now, Milly," he said gravely, "really you women are very illogical. YF is impossible. Stop! Listen to me, Milly, before you go out of that door. I—"

Doctor Syntax sprang toward her and clasped her in his arms. "Milly!" he cried. "Tre—Tre—I've found my spectacles!"

DRANES CLAIM SITE OF NATION'S CAPITAL

Woman Says Documents Show Title to Tract.

Washington.—A claim for property in Maryland and the District of Columbia worth hundreds of millions of dollars, based upon an old English grant, is about to be made to the government of the United States. The property in question includes all of Washington, all of Prince Georges county, Maryland, adjacent to the capital, and other parcels of land. The claim will be made by Mrs. Nellie Drane Pascoe on behalf of herself and hundreds of other Dranes throughout the country.

Mrs. Pascoe called at the White House to give a chest of California fruit to President and Mrs. Coolidge on behalf of a packing concern of that state, but she came to Washington also, she explained, to consult attorneys regarding her claim to the nation's capital.

Mrs. Pascoe said that just before her father died he told her of the possibility of her becoming immensely wealthy and gave her documents showing that what are now the District of Columbia and Prince Georges county were at one time the property of James Anthony Drane II, who came to America with Lord Baltimore's party in 1634.

One of the papers set forth that this Drane bought land and settled in Prince Georges county, near what is now Beltsville, Md. The exact acreage is not known, but it was large, as it extended south from Beltsville to Bladensburg, Md., and was a part of the ten-mile square now known as Washington, D. C.

It also extended five miles north to White Oak, in Montgomery county, Maryland, and west ten miles to what is now known as Sligo, Montgomery county.

Just how the land got out of James Anthony Drane's possession Mrs. Pascoe and her relatives do not know, but they believe that "squatters" took it. If she can establish her right to it, she said, she believes the government will buy it back from her.

"Of course, I haven't much chance of getting it," said Mrs. Pascoe, "but I am going to investigate until I determine the exact situation. I have engaged a lawyer in California."

Trees Grown in China Resist Chestnut Blight

Washington.—Thrilling stories of adventure and interesting scientific discoveries have been reported to the National Geographic society by Joseph F. Rock, discoverer of the chaulmoogra tree that yields a leprosy-combating oil, and leader of the society's expedition into Yunnan, a vast and little explored province in southwestern China.

Mr. Rock, a well-known plant authority, has just returned to Washington and, in narrating his experiences, tells of finding in Yunnan aboriginal tribes who still practice religious ceremonies that predate the introduction of Buddhism, and the discovery of a blight-resisting chestnut tree, which, it is hoped, will aid in restoring the diseased chestnut timber crop in the United States.

The explorer brought back from the wilds of the Chinese province some 1,700 specimens of birds, 500 mammal specimens and more than 60,000 plants. He also came into possession of books used by the Nashi, or Moso, priests, containing ancient writing in picture form. The books also antedate Buddhism in China and Tibet and include a story of a great flood.

Discover Skeletons of Men of Stone Age

Krasnoyarsk.—Russian archeologists excavating near here have unearthed several human bodies belonging to the Stone age, a number of prehistoric mammoths, dinosaurs, bison, gigantic stags and more than 750 stone and bone implements, ornaments and weapons of the prehistoric era.

One of the human skeletons found by the explorers is believed to be at least 17,000 years old.

The expedition was undertaken two years ago with a view toward fixing the home of the prehistoric man in Siberia and is working under the direction of Professors Auerbach and Sosnowsky, distinguished Russian archeologists.

Divorced 5 Years, Aged Couple Rewed

Los Angeles, Cal.—Divorced five years ago after forty years of married life, Hans and Caroline Erickson were remarried the other day by Superior Judge Thompson.

After the couple, each of whom is past sixty years of age, were divorced Hans came to California. He settled down in Pasadena. One by one their four grown children followed their father and made their home in the Crown City.

Three months ago the mother came to visit her children. The old love was rekindled and Erickson, she shyly told Judge Thompson, began a courtship. Then the happy pair sought the services of a magistrate to reunite them.

The bride was given away by Low Head of Pasadena.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Miss Ellen Trone and Mr. Robert E. Codner, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Codner of Groveport, Ohio, were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Trone, East Ringgold. The ceremony was performed out of doors by Rev. W. H. Gysan, in the presence of 100 relatives and friends. Mrs. F. S. Jacoby and Mrs. A. J. Dunn of Columbus, sang a duet "Out of the Dusk;" Mrs. Jacoby sang a solo number, "Oh Promise Me" and Mrs. Dunn sang "Because." Mr. Kenneth Williams played the wedding marches. There were five flower girls, Katherine Gessley, of this city; Verna Marburger, of Bremen, Indiana; Anna Arminda May, of Reynoldsburg; Eleanor Jacoby and Elizabeth Ann Martin, of Columbus. They wore frocks of blue and white voile and carried baskets filled with garden flowers. Robert Wells Martin, the ring bearer, wore a white sailor suit. Mrs. Harry Edwards, the matron of honor, appeared in a gown of French blue crepe with head-band of gold and carried an arm bouquet of light pink gladioli. The two bridesmaids, Miss Mary Grace Sims of Groveport, and Miss Gertrude Mace were in dresses of Orchid voile and wore bands of orchid ribbon around their hair. The bride wore a white georgette gown made with draped overskirt. She had a wealth of silver foliage in her hair and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. Mr. Dale Lorimer of Groveport, was best man. Mr. Codner and his bride will live in Columbus on their return from a trip to northern Michigan and Canada. The bride has been making her home in Columbus with Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Martin, 349 Tulane Road.

The fourth annual reunion of the Pickel family was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. I. Pickel, near Kinderhook, on Sunday, August 10. Near fifty relatives and friends gathered there with well filled baskets and a wonderful dinner was served in the spacious dining room at the noon hour. The afternoon was spent with social chat and music. Ice cream and cake was served in the evening. The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, John Pickel; vice president, S. I. Pickel; secretary, Bertha Porter.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. S. I. Pickel, Mr. and Mrs. John Pickel, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Pickel and family, Mildred Karshner, of Circleville; Mr. and Mrs. Levi Graulich, of Duval; Mr. and Mrs. William McDowell and Ernest and Mary McDowell, of Darbyville; Warren Chambers, of Canal Winchester; Mrs. Milton Borror of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hatfield, of Mt. Sterling; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Chambers and family, Mr. and Mrs. Hoard Chambers and family, Mrs. Lewis Mowery, Mrs. Effie Spangler, Mr. and Mrs. Will Mowery of Laurelville; Mrs. O. H. Minic, Mr. Jacob, Earl and Lincoln Kane of Rockbridge; Mrs. Bertha Porter and children, Frances and Herman, and Irvin Pickel, of Williamsport; Mr. and Mrs. William Cross, Mr. and Mrs. John Ward and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Kuhn of Kinderhook.

The July meeting of the Darbyville W. C. T. U. was held with Mrs. Reub Row, with Mrs. Hott and Mrs. Shepherd assisting. The program was most excellent. The Bible in the Public Schools was the topic. Several papers were read and the opinions of many great men. Surely all parents want their children to hear the Word of God read in the schools.

The music was especially good; the songs in the jubilee song book are beautiful. We also had a piano solo by Miss Alice Shepherd; a song by Miss Mary Robbins, another song by Louise Carpenter and violin solo by Helen Yates. Two members were secured and a pleasant, social while we were enjoying ice cream and cake and ice tea.

The August meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. W. S. Carpenter's daughter, Mrs. W. O. Flowers, on Wednesday, August 20. It will be a very important meeting. Officers are to be elected also delegates to the state W. C. T. U. convention at Cincinnati, September 24, and delegates to the county convention to be held at Derby September 6.

Every member please come and everyone who has said they would become a member, this jubilee year meeting, August 20.

A very pleasant surprise was given Mr. G. W. Smith at his home, 1204 Town street, it being his 76th birthday anniversary. Those present were: Mrs. G. W. Smith, Mrs. Ila Greeno and son, Howard, Mr. and Mrs. James Greenley and son, Orvil, Mr. and Mrs. William Greenley, Mr. Lewis Smith and son, Leroy. Ice cream and cake were served, the cake being furnished by the Wallace bakery and was beautifully decorated for the occasion. A delightful evening was spent, after which all departed wishing Mr. Smith many more anniversaries.

Charles W. Fullen, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Homer G. Fullen, of North Court street, and Miss Georgia L. Stout, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Stout, of South Scioto street, were quietly married this morning at the Evangelical parsonage. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. D. Paulin at 8:30 o'clock. The only attendants were Miss Ruth Fullen and Clarence Hott. The young couple left shortly after the ceremony for a wedding trip to the northern lake resorts. On their return they will go to house-keeping in a house recently built by the groom on Northridge road. Mr. Fullen has been accountant and bookkeeper of the Circleville Lumber company and his bride has been for several years assistant to Dr. Gay L. Hittler, the dentist. Both have many friends, who wish them a world of happiness.

Mr. John LaRue, of Ashville, and Miss Esther Newman, of New Lexington, were quietly married August 7. The bride is a graduate of Ohio State university and the groom is a prominent young farmer and a graduate of the Walnut township high school.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Mader announce the marriage of their daughter, Myra Marcella, to Raymond Porter, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Rader, of this city, on Sunday, August 10, at Covington, Kentucky.

Mrs. Phillip R. Neff and Miss Nora Phillips entertained August 8, at the home of the latter with a miscellaneous shower for their sister, Mrs. Richard Hill, Helen Phillips.

The Anderson reunion was held in the Van Meter grove Sunday, August 10. A large gathering of relatives and friends enjoyed a pleasant day and a fine dinner.

Ford Will Not Make Race for the Senatorial Nomination.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 13.—Henry Ford will not run in the Michigan primary for the senatorial nomination. Scoring those persons unknown to him who placed his name before the voters, Ford, in a caustic telegram to Charles J. Deland, secretary of state, withdrew from the Republican primary. The telegram, which was sent from Sudbury, Mass., where Ford is spending a brief vacation, said:

"It has recently been called to my attention that persons unknown to me and without consulting me in any way for purposes that I am at a loss to understand, have made unwarranted use of my name for the senatorial nomination. I fail to understand their motive, but believe that it can not be a good one and I repudiate the whole undertaking and withdraw, as I am in no way a candidate for any office at this time."

Bold Attempt to Rob State Bank in Illinois Is Foiled.

Pana, Ill., Aug. 13.—An attempt to rob the H. N. Schuyler State bank here was foiled by a bank employee who turned on a burglar alarm as one robber, under the guns of two associates, looted the institution of $10,000. The two gunmen ran and escaped in a waiting automobile driven by a fourth man. A member of the Anti-Thief association shot the other robber through the head as he emerged from the bank building carrying the cash. The robber, whose name is unknown, was fatally wounded. The money was recovered.

NEW CHIEF OF STAFF

Major General Hines to Succeed General Pershing.

Washington, Aug. 13.—President Coolidge approved the appointment of Major General John L. Hines, deputy chief of staff, to be chief of staff of the army, succeeding General Pershing, when he retires from active service on Sept. 13. Brigadier General Nolan, now assistant chief of staff, will become deputy chief of staff, effective the same date with the same rank. Hines has served as deputy chief since the resignation of former Major General Harbord on Dec. 5, 1922. He was adjutant general under Pershing on the expedition into Mexico and commanded troops and served at general headquarters in France.

Yosemite Park Threatened.

San Francisco, Aug. 13.—Forest fires in California, Nevada, Oregon and Washington continued to burn into virgin timber and one is eating its way along the scenic banks of the Merced river towards Yosemite national park. The Merced river fire, which was five miles from El Portal entrance to the Yosemite valley, was being fought by 200 civilians and 150 convicts from a road camp nearby. The fire already has burned over 12,000 acres, including 4,000 heavily timbered lands in the Sierra national forest.

AMUSEMENTS

A story of New York and Arizona, of western ranch life and eastern society, is the Paramount picture, "The Call of the Canyon," a screen version of Zane Grey's latest novel, directed by Victor Fleming and featuring Richard Dix, Lois Wilson and Estelle Taylor, which had a highly successful premier at the Met theater last evening.

"The Call of the Canyon" has a double appeal for those who like society dramas, ball room scenes and for those who enjoy virile western dramas. There are many comedy touches thruout the course of the production, with impressive shots of the Arizona cattle country, its mountains and canyons. The love interest is furnished by the featured players as Glenn Kilbourne, an easterner, ordered west for his health, a successful hog raiser; Carley Burch, in love with Glenn, but too greatly attached to the mad society whirl of New York to sacrifice her empty pleasures for the clean wholesome life offered her as Kilbourne's wife; and Flo Hutter, daughter of a sheep rancher who gave Glenn his start in the west, the girl having nursed Kilbourne back to health when it seemed that only a miracle would pull him thru. The climax, following a series of thrilling incidents, is a happy one for all concerned.

Then, too, there is the supporting cast—a handpicked array of stellar players, it might without exaggeration be called. Noah Berry, Ricardo Cortez, Fred Huntley and Lillian Leighton are included among the more prominent players while others are Helen Dunbar, Leonard Clapham, Edward Clayton and Dorothy Seastrom. The picture is fascinating from start to finish.

Boat Travels Fast

Seventy miles an hour in three inches of water is the astonishing performance claimed for a revolutionary type of air-propelled glider boat developed by E. W. Davies of Dudley, England, writes a correspondent of the Detroit News.

An airplane propeller and engine drive the hydroglider, says Popular Science Monthly. Thus the enormous friction exerted by the water upon high-speed propeller blades is avoided and the navigation of the glider in shallow water is made possible. Even the main rudder operates by deflecting air instead of water. There are two small auxiliary rudders, which are used for maneuvering the boat into dockage or for similar purposes, but these are lifted from the water as soon as the craft is under way. The hull is scow shaped and about 15 feet long.

The motoring public is rapidly coming to realize that in practical results the good Maxwell is to the four-cylinder field, what the Chrysler is in six-cylinder practice.

Practically complete absence of vibration, sterling reliability, new ease of riding and driving, remarkable performance, and equally remarkable economy produce for the owner of this car a far higher degree of motoring satisfaction and value.

Until you know first hand what the good Maxwell now is and what it does—you are simply in no position to judge cars from the standpoint of the most recent development.

An Ice-Making Machine Saved the Inventor

By WALTER DELANEY

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"SORRY, my friend, but you are about ten years too late."

"Then my invention is worthless?" inquired Ned Darrow in a tone of the deepest disappointment.

Young Darrow uttered a sigh of regret. He proceeded to put back in its leather case a device about two feet square. It was made up of coils, a glass jar, wires and tubes, a receptacle for sulphuric acid and a cranking attachment. By starting the sulphuric acid in motion by turning the crank, within a few minutes' time the quart of water in the condenser would become a solid cake of ice.

"I built so many hopes upon it!" murmured Darrow. "Everybody at home in the little country town where I lived encouraged me," and the honest blue eyes bore a trace of suspicious moisture. "There's a sweet little girl will be the worst disappointed. Poor Nellie!"

"I wouldn't give up so easily if I were you," said the lawyer in a sympathetic tone. "Why don't you work something out of it in a small way?"

"As how, now?" queried Ned, with flickering hope.

"Well, try some remote country. It would be new there."

"Can't you suggest a place?"

"Take Australia, for instance. Or Japan. South America, too, might prove a profitable field."

"I'll try it—I won't give up!" announced Ned Darrow determinedly.

There was a pathetic parting with Nellie Wyman, and sad but hopeful Ned found himself aboard an ocean steamer headed for the antipodes.

It was smooth and pleasant sea progress until the Arcturus came within five hundred miles of her destination, the city of Melbourne. A terrific storm arose and crew and passengers were hurried to the lifeboats.

"No baggage allowed!" announced the captain of the steamer sternly, as Ned started to enter one of the boats, his precious invention and its operating accessories in the leather case.

He was bound to save his machine, whatever came. This decision prevented his getting into the lifeboats. At last a lurch of the steamer sent him nearly overboard. He seized a safety plank and with it dropped into the water. Amid the high waves and the blackness of the night he drifted alone across a fathomless stretch of waters.

Almost famished and perishing from cold and exposure, the next morning at daybreak Ned was washed ashore. Revived and encouraged, he was about to line the coast, hoping to come upon some settlement, when with hideous yells there burst from a near thicket a score or more of dusky, half-naked savages.

Ned was bound hand and foot, placed upon a litter and carried through what suggested an interminable jungle.

After twelve hours of steady traveling they reached the royal palace. It seemed. At least Ned was carried within the structure, where upon a gaudy throne sat a thick-lipped, greased and painted savage.

From the hungry way in which this rubicund monarch viewed him, Ned decided that he would soon be roasted and eaten. The curiosity and interest of King Obi, however, were next fixed upon the leather case that contained the ice-freezing device.

He ordered it opened. Then he began fingering the cogs and wheels of the machine. The clicking as he turned the crank tickled his childish nature. He glanced at Ned, bobbed his head and grunted, as if to say:

"What is this?"

Ned bobbed vigorously, as if assenting to show the king what the machine could do. His bonds were cut. He set the device in position, filled the acid receptacle and taking out the glass that held the water indicated by motions that it be filled with water.

Then Ned turned the crank. All hands in the royal court watched him raptly. Their eyes bulged as at the end of eight minutes he drew out a pound cake of ice.

"Hoo! hoo!" shouted the king, as the ice was handed to him, and he dropped the unusual substance from his fingers as though it were a piece of red-hot iron.

But once his royal highness cooled the drink at his side and enjoyed its rare freshness, he virtually appointed Ned ice purveyor to the crown.

Ned knew that his life was now surely safe. For a week he catered to the palate of King Obi. Then the sulphuric acid supply ran out. Ned explained to Obi that he would have to go to the nearest settlement to replenish it. By signs he made a bargain with the king that he was to furnish him an escort, give him his liberty and he would secure the acid and give him the ice-maker.

So it was arranged, and in payment for the same Obi handed Ned a little sack full of diamonds.

One day two months later, well-dressed, almost a capitalist, with bright face and a happy heart, Ned appeared at the office of the patent lawyer to pay him the fee for advice. The attorney had refused to accept it when Ned was poor. The latter related his strange story.

"And now, I suppose," smiled the lawyer, "you are going to expand your invention in a large way?"

"Yes," replied Ned, "after I have married Nellie."

Natural Ice Beneath Bearing Orange Tree

Natural ice beneath a bearing orange tree is the remarkable sight which, during a cool spell, attracted the attention of the residents of Pomona, Cal.

Through a wonderful coincidence of two very unusual events, a few persons were privileged to witness the spectacle. An orange rancher in cranking an old model two-cycle car was unaware that his engine had backfired, causing the motor to turn just opposite to the customary direction. Speeding up the motor and throwing in the gears, he had backed through a wire fence, a rose bush and a fig tree before rupturing the water hydrant and being brought to a stop by the sturdy orange tree behind it.

All that night the injured faucet continued to send up a finely atomized spray of water. Coincident with this there occurred a second wonder in the orange belt—frost visited the region of semi-tropic climate that night. When the sun rose out of the arid desert to the east the next morning he showed a veritable miracle, for in his absence the minute particles of water had one by one congealed into the rank undergrowth and low-lying pepper-tree boughs until they were formed into cold bluish monuments of solid ice. Such a spectacle of vegetable ice beneath tropical vegetation probably has never before occurred in California and could not have occurred elsewhere. Then the perverted tropic sun beheld the sight and the thing was no more.

Buffalo Meat on Sale

Despite many assertions to the contrary, the American bison is far from becoming extinct. The Philip herd near Fort Pierre, S. D., has been rapidly increasing, so that recently 13 head were slaughtered and sent to St. Paul and Minneapolis to be placed in cold storage. There any one who has a taste for buffalo steak may buy it for himself. The owners of the herd have made several attempts to dispose of it as a whole, but have not been successful. Now, however, they are building up a fair business in supplying the market with this new delicacy. In addition, an annual buffalo hunt may be instituted.

Has Many Relatives

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Cedric Shephard of Northfield, Vt., is well supplied with living great-grandfathers and great-grandmothers and other relatives of like class, as follows: Four great-grandfathers, two grandfathers, four great-great-uncles, fifteen great-uncles, two great-grandmothers, two grandmothers, four great-great-aunts and eleven great-aunts. All the great-great-grandparents are less than seventy years of age and none of the grandparents is more than forty-five.

Unfortunate Twin

One of twins, who was born before midnight on March 31, 1910, became entitled to leave school at Wellingborough, England, on April 1, the end of the last term. But his brother, born two hours later, cannot leave school until the end of next term, two months hence, according to the board of education regulations.

Cholera Loss More Than $27,000,000

Much Can Be Prevented by Proper Sanitation.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Hog cholera caused a loss of more than $27,000,000 to the swine industry of the United States during the year ended April 30, 1924, according to a recent compilation by the United States Department of Agriculture. More than half of the total loss occurred in the corn belt states, where hogs are especially numerous. A comparison of the number of hogs, with the loss caused by cholera in each state, shows that the ravages of the disease are approximately in proportion to the hog population.

In computing the losses from hog cholera, specialists of the bureau of animal industry estimate that 80 per cent of losses from all causes are due to this dread disease. Most of this loss can be prevented by the proper sanitation and the preventive-serum treatment. Bulletins giving full information on hog cholera, its control and prevention may be obtained on request from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

Colorado Potato Beetle Eradicated by Spraying

The adult Colorado potato beetle, which is about half an inch long, rounded, yellow in color, but striped with ten black lines, passes the winter in the ground. When the potato plants come up in the spring the beetles appear to feed on the leaves and to lay eggs. The eggs are placed in clusters on the under side of the leaves and are conspicuous by their yellow color. In a week small, plump slugs hatch, which feed on the foliage for some three weeks, then enter the ground to pupate and about three weeks later emerge as adult striped beetles.

A second generation follows the same cycle of eggs, grub, pupa and adult. Although there is much overlapping of the stages, the first generation of grubs is most abundant during July and August. It is in the grub stage that most of the damage is done and, accordingly, a spraying with poison should be given to ward off their feeding. There is no set time to spray and no set number of applications.

Either arsenate of lead, one to two pounds to fifty gallons of water, or paris green, one-half pound to fifty gallons, will serve, but in the latter case care must be taken to keep the paris green well stirred while spraying. Gathering the adult beetles by hand, especially in the early part of the season, will go a long way toward checking the insect.—Washington Experiment Station.

Simple Rule to Insure Profit From Home Garden

Though the insect, fungus and bacterial pests that trouble garden, ornamental and orchard plants number among the thousands, they can be fairly well controlled even by the amateur, says V. R. Gardner, of the Missouri College of Agriculture.

Fortunately, the amateur does not need to know all the pests by name to control them. Let him remember that most cankers, leaf spots, scabs, blights, wilts, mildews and rusts are the work of fungus or bacterial diseases and that insects are of two main types—those that eat holes and those that suck juices through a bill—and he has a fair chance of diagnosing accurately the general cause of his trouble. Then let him remember that bordeaux mixture is a leading remedy for a considerable percentage of the diseases, arsenate of lead for the chewing insects and tobacco in one form or another for the sucking insects; let him provide himself with these materials and with a good dusting apparatus or liquid sprayer for putting them on and he is ready for the battle. Let him remember that a vigorous offensive is often the best defense and take the battle into the enemy's territory.

Farm Hints

Some men can't take advice, because all their time is spent in giving it.

Rats are enemies of the harvest—let the youngsters and the dogs loose upon them.

Neither timothy hay nor sudan grass is a very good feed for milk cows. It takes three tons of sudan hay to equal one ton of alfalfa.

Low milk yields during the summer may be due to bothersome flies. There are sprays on the market that act as a repellent of flies.

City and village markets offer a good opportunity to producers of perishables to sell at a profit and yet at a price the consumer is willing to pay.

Milk is on the average about 87 per cent water, and cows giving milk need to drink about four times as much as dry cows drink. See that they have plenty that is clean and fresh.

The wet weather this spring has been mighty good for potatoes and will be just as good for late blight. The growers who have been spraying with bordeaux this season have been taking out a good kind of insurance against blight.

PIKE COUNTY REUNION.

The sixth annual Pike county reunion will be held Sunday, September 7, at the Urbana fair grounds. This invitation is meant for all people who ever lived in Pike county, Ohio. Nearly 600 people attended this reunion last year. Invitations will be mailed to all whose addresses are known. Each family should bring silverware, plates and drinking cup. The password will be a hearty handshake. Come and bring a well filled basket. The officers of the association are: President, Fred Beckwith; secretary, Zoe Limbaugh; treasurer, G. L. Wills; corresponding secretary, Flossie Saylor.
